30 Divorces Per Hour

Lodge on the Ether

By Arthur Brisbane

BERLIN has proved that it pays to TRY public ownership, even if you do not keep at it. Berlin's electric light and power companies, owned by the people, have been sold to private individuals, including American investors, for $132,000,000. In addition the city gets $7,000,000 of the company's stock and one-half or its excess profits, that is, all profits above a normal return on the investment.

That will seem rather Bolshevistic to our private power companies at home. Think of paying for a public monopoly, then giving the citizens a share in the company, and half of the excess profits.

That is worthy of Lenin and Stalin, at their worst.

The American Iron and Steel Institute shows that Pennsylvania is still the great iron state, exceeding all others in production of finished rolled iron and steel; 14,860,360 tons was last year's Pennsylvania production.

It would be interesting to know what progress has been made in ELECTRIC production of steel, in which Judge Gary was much interested, at the time of his death.

"Big Steel" might let us know about that.

The electric method of producing steel, less expensive, requiring less high temperature, and producing a steel far superior to the usual kind, almost rust proof, would change the steel industry, as coal and ore found together in Pennsylvania changed and destroyed the old system of smelting ore from bogs, with charcoal for fuel.

The electric process using ores now worthless, including iron sands that abound along the Pacific might transfer steel supremacy to the Pacific coast.

It is said that one good idea, one great invention, would change the world from depression to prosperity overnight. The world was in despair after Waterloo. The invention of steam started everything going, increased population by 800 per cent, multiplied the value of industry by 1000.

Who will produce the one idea?

Reno, Nevada, has solved part of its problems, while the rest of the world has talked, with a divorce idea. The divorces now average one every two minutes.

Each represents three weeks of residence by "liberal spenders." A man anxious to get rid of a wife is more liberal than he was at the start.

Lawyers collect large fees, which remain in Nevada, and while the three weeks' legal residence drag along, visitors leave much of their money in gambling houses that the law encourages, or ignores.

However, that is only changing money from one pocket to another, it creates nothing new, and while it may help Nevada, it will not help the nation at large.

A microbe, living inside of a 50,000-ton steamship goes about its little affairs, using its tiny fraction of energy, never dreaming of the gigantic power at work in the ship's engines.

Have you read Sir Oliver Lodge's intensely interesting and important theory as to the ether, which he looks upon as our cosmic source of power, entirely beyond our feeble minds. We are the microbes.

Unlike Herbert Spencer, Lodge believes in immortality for human beings, even immortality of personality and character. That is pleasanter for common minds than Spencer's cold decision, at the end of his life, "my intellect forbids me to expect anything but annihilation." Annihilation is such a DISCOURAGING word.

Sir Oliver Lodge's conclusion, "based on elementary facts" is that personality, including character and memory is a permanent reality. How pleasant to believe that you will wake up in another world, and say "hello, here I am again. I wonder where the family is."

Sir Oliver's statement concerning the ether and its nature, whether it convinces you or not, is that of a great scientist, not an ordinary man to contradict him, on science, would be like a maltese kitten telling Edison "you don't know anything about electricity."

Lodge's statement in full you may read in his little book "Beyond Physics," inexpensive, published in England by Allen and Unwin. If Lodge is right, the ether interests you, for everything, including our important selves must be explained in connection with the local central fact and force THE ETHER OF SPACE.

Ten per cent of those that see this column will not be bored by the following rather long quotation and 10 per cent. in this case means two or three millions:

"It (ether) fills all space, though we have no real knowl-

84 DIVORCES IN BIG RENO 'REVEL'

Love Knots Are Cut at Rate of One Every 10 Minutes by Two Judges

Reno, Nevada, May 4 (INS)—Reno's greatest "graduation" party will reach a gay climax tonight as more than four score "graduates" of the divorce courts celebrate "liberty bells"

It is an old Reno custom for divorcees to stage a farewell party the night their decrees are granted. 2 JUDGES AT WORK

Promptly at 9 a. m. today the divorce mill began to grind out a record grist of "liberty papers."

With clocklike precision the first cases were called before Judges Benjamin F. Curler and Thomas F. Moran and within the allotted 10 minutes the first two divorces under the new six weeks' residence law had been granted.

Edith D. Partridge Rilly won the first decree from Thomas P. Rilly, they were married in Danville, N. Y., and she charged extreme cruelty. Her case was heard by Judge Curler.

TWO ACCUSED IN KILEY KILLING

Edward Consalvi, alias Edward Barrett, of Somerville, and James C. Garrick, of Philips st., West End, were charged with the murder of James M. Kiley, Somerville gasoline filling station attendant, in Somerville District Court today.

Following their arraignment Chief Thomas A. Damery and Sergt. Daniel O'Connell of the Somerville police went before the Middlesex grand jury to ask the indictment of the two men on the murder charge.

The two, with two companions, had been held by Somerville police since last Friday, after a gun said by Capt. Charles Van Amburgh, ballistics expert, to have been used in the killing was found in the apartment in which they were arrested last Thursday.

Chief Damery told Judge Malcolm E. Stuntevant that he had insufficient evidence to warrant holding the other two men, and asked that they be released.

Consalvi and Garrick were held without bail pending a hearing next Monday, May 11.

Chief Damery announced that the search for a fifth man, believed to have been involved in the shooting, would continue.

HOOVER ASKS CUT IN WAR MACHINES

President Stresses the Need of Cutting the Military Forces in Greeting International Body

Washington, May 4—President Hoover today called upon world powers to cut down their huge war machines as a means to lessen the heavy tax burdens of the world.

In welcoming the delegates to the sixth congress of the International Chamber of Commerce, the President stressed the need to curb vast competitions in armaments, which not only heavily tax the people in this time of world-wide depression, but also provoke a spirit of unrest.

46 NATIONS REPRESENTED.

Over 1000 representatives of 46 nations gathered for the congress. They were told by the President that their discussions would contribute much to world advancement at this trying time. Mr. Hoover said:

"It is needless for me to emphasize the high degree of economic interdependence of the world—we require no more emphatic demonstration than the present world-wide depression. Although the United States enjoys a far greater economic independence than any other large country, yet we have been gravely affected by world forces."

President Hoover compared the present depression with those which followed former great wars in history.

"Over three-quarters of the commercially important population of the world has been in a state of social and political upheaval at some time even during the last three years," he said, adding:

"Although some secondary part

Announcement of the resignation was made following a meeting of the directors of the lines today.

It was also announced that Charles Hayden, head of Hayden, Stone & Co., has become a director of the Eastern Steamship lines. For many years he has been a large owner of the company's securities, and with his late partner, Galen A. Stone, took a controlling interest in 1906.

TRAP SET TO CATCH SON IN MELROSE CEMETERY

Essex Prosecutor Takes Up Case Against Missing Bank Receiver

Robert M. Vaughan, father of Guy L. Vaughan, fugitive bank receiver, was hastily buried ahead of schedule in Wyoming Cemetery, Melrose, today, while police watched the gates on the possibility his missing son might attend.

The burial was originally planned for 2 p. m., but took place shortly after 11 o'clock, with only six mourners present.

Police watching for the missing receiver, who it was thought might attempt to attend the funeral, barred all newspaper photographers from the cemetery.

BRIEF SERVICES HELD

The funeral was scheduled to take place from the Vaughan home at 53 Cedar Park, Melrose, at 2 o'clock, with the Rev. W. C. Herrick of Trinity Episcopal church, Melrose, officiating.

At 10:30 the undertaker, Henry W. Clark, obtained a burial permit from the board of health, showing death was primarily due to a blood clot, with arteria sclerosis a contributing cause.

Armed with a permit, Clark drove to the Vaughan home, and a few minutes later left, to return shortly with the clergyman. Brief services were held and then the casket was borne to a waiting motor hearse, which was followed to the cemetery by two automobiles containing six persons.

The elder Vaughan was strongly affected by the difficulties of his son, and many believed that his death Friday night was caused by a broken heart.

No sign of Guy Vaughan was seen near the house or cemetery, and the authorities had no information to show he had appeared in this section.

CREGG BEGINS ACTION.

While hurried plans for the Vaughan funeral were being made, a third county actively entered the probe of the missing receiver's affairs.

District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg announced he had assigned State Detective Richard L. Griffin to investigate Vaughan's activities in Essex County, with particular reference to the Petrochelli defunct private bank in Lawrence.

Suffolk and Middlesex counties are conducting separate investigations, and Atty. Gen. Warner is probing the office of Bank Commissioner Guy in connection with the case.

YOUNG ROOSEVELT HELPS HURLEY DEFEAT BANKING RING

WAR OVER LOAN RATES ENDS QUICKLY

State St. Bankers Give in When Hurley Announces Plan for Visit to New York

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

How "Young Jim" Roosevelt, son of the distinguished governor of New York, was brought into the arena of Massachusetts politics by State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley in a dramatic move to compel the Boston banking coterie to grant a favorable rate of interest on the state's recent $3,000,000 construction loan is revealed here today for the first time.

Hurley engaged in an outright war with the banking ring.

The construction loan, for unemployment relief, was the first substantial borrowing he sought since he became state treasurer. He determined it within a reasonable rate of interest.

$25,000,000 DEPOSITED

"I am the agent of the people of this state," he said to the bankers. "They give you the franchise which permits you to do business. We have deposited $25,000,000 of public money with you. We are a customer and we want a good, fair rate in return for the favors we do you."

The best rate he could get was 2 per cent. Their offer dissatisfied him. He telegraphed to Senator David I. Walsh at Washington and was informed by him that the national government was getting money at the rate of 1.5 per cent on its vast loans, such as for the soldiers' bonus. Wall Street informed him that the same rate was procurable there, but he didn't want to be tied in "with Wall Street" while state treasurer of this Commonwealth.

He called "Smiling Jim" Roosevelt to his office and unfolded his plans to the youth, still a freshman at Boston University Law School

NEAR-RIOT AT ANTI-FASCIST 'MOB' TRIAL

All Three Accused of Attempts to Break Up a Parade Plead Not Guilty

An excited crowd milled about East Boston courthouse today as three Italians were arraigned on charges arising from attempt yesterday to smash a parade bent on honoring the memory of three Italian aviators.

There was no trouble before or after the court session, but for a time it looked as if there might be a repetition of yesterday's outbreak which, according to the police, was an anti-Fascist attack.

Charged with assault and battery on Luigi Brogna, parade chairman, Guiseppe Codgmone, 48, of Marion st., pleaded not guilty. Ignatio Licari, 33, of Meridian st., and Leo Pinardi of Cambridge st., East Cambridge, pleaded not guilty to circulating seditious literature.

They were released on small bail for a full hearing in the same court on May 12. Police procured complaints against three others who will be arrested for destroying a wreath carried by a girl and assault and battery on a florist.

Disposal of the case saw the exodus from the courtroom of most of the spectators, practically all seats being filled by countrymen of the accused, interested in witnessing the outcome of the outbreak.

The attempt to break up the parade occured in Maverick sq., Eugena was hit with a monkey wrench. Miss Angelina Duchi, 20, of Lexington st., lost her wreath and Michael Bisnchi, Maverick st., florist, was struck.

Another wreath was procured and order was restored, the wreath was carried to the airport and dropped on the harbor waters in tribute to the aviators, Maddalena, Ceconi and DaMonti, killed recently in a plane crash. Italian war veterans took a prominent part in the ceremonies and the Italian and American flags were prominently displayed.

HOME BROKEN BY TEACHER, WIFE SAYS

Mrs. Ida M. Kenney Wins Divorce; Husband Trapped in Hotel With Beauty

Her middle-aged husband's infatuation for a young Nova Scotian school teacher led to a romance which wrecked their home, Mrs. Ida May Kenney testified in Norfolk Probate Court today.

Mrs. Kenney was granted a divorce on the grounds of infidelity from Storrus L. Kenney of Brookline.

"He often showed me the young woman's picture, and boasted of her beauty," Mrs. Kenney testified.

In court with Mrs. Kenney was James R. Ray, a private detective, who corroborated her story of trapping Kenney with Miss Ruth Doggett, the school teacher, in a Boston hotel on Jan. 22. According to Mrs. Kenney and Ray, Miss Doggett admitted her identity.

Mrs. Ruth G. Baker, of Braintree, was granted a divorce from Guy L. Baker, charging that he deserted her in 1927 after six years of married life.

During the time they lived together she was absent from home until the early hours of the morning several nights a week, he said. He was granted an uncontested divorce.

WIFE CHARGES DESERTION.

Mrs. Alice G. Flynn, of Quincy, was granted a divorce from Edward H. Flynn whom, she charged, had worked only five months since they were married in 1928. Until the time he deserted her in 1928, she said, she not only supported him, but was subjected to frequent beatings.

$5000 BLUE SKY FINE LEVIED

The National City Co. of Boston was fined $5000, the maximum, by Judge Donovan in municipal court today for violation of the Massachusetts Blue Sky law, in selling securities unlisted with the Department of Public Utilities.

Judge Donovan made his finding of guilty after B. Loring Young, former speaker of the House, acting as attorney for the company, withdrew a plea of nolo contendere, which the court had refused to accept, and substituted a plea of not guilty.

YOUNG APPEALS

Young appealed from the court's decision.

The stock involved was convertible participating preferred and common shares of the Oliver Farms Equipment Co. One of the five complaints, Carl M. Pihl, president of the World Engineering Co. of Wilmington, Del., was said to have bought more than $200,000 worth.

OLIVER FITFUL, MOTHER SAYS

A mother took the witness stand in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court today in defense of a son charged with murder, and in a quavering tones told of his youthful eccentricities.

She was Mrs. Anne Oliver, mother of John J. Oliver, on trial with John D. Wall and Walter Sousa, all of Somerville, for the slaying of Evangelista L. Bagni, night manager of a Somerville filling station.

Dashing her eyes with a handkerchief, Mrs. Oliver testified that John suffered from convulsions shortly after his birth, and for a time she feared he would die.

SANGS HEAD ON FLOOR

He outgrew them eventually, she said, but when three years old was hit on the head, the scar still being visible.

She told of calling her son mornings only to find him in bed partially dressed with no recollection of having put on his clothes.

"He always acted queerly at home," she said. "He was cranky and irritable. Once he split the panel of a door with his fist. Another time he laid down and burned his hand on the floor."

In barely audible tones Mrs. Oliver told John started to drink at the age of 15.

She added that there was a strain of alcoholism in the family.

Mrs. Oliver told of visiting John at Somerville police station after his arrest, and advising him to tell the truth.

The boy's aunt, Mrs. Frances Concannon of Bow st., Somerville, testified to practically the same effect. She went on taking the stand but recovered her composure.

IN SHIRLEY SCHOOL

The next witness was Fred H. Hall, business agent at Shirley school, who told of young Oliver's confinement there for nine months. He said Oliver was taken to the school in September, having been surrendered by probation officers following an automobile charge.

When court opened, John J. Oliver, father of the defendant, resumed the stand and continued his testimony begun Friday.

He told of various members of the family suffering from alcoholism and of relatives now in State hospitals. One died in Tewksbury, he testified.

Self-Government, Dry Law's Solution, Says Gov. Ritchie

Washington, May 4—Return to the formula of self-government for the states on the prohibition issue will solve that problem, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, declared over the radio last night.

The results of prohibition may conform to the needs of some sections and communities, but in others, Ritchie declares, it has brought "new forms of commercialized crime, gangsters and racketeers and has spoiled the ermine of the judiciary."

THEIR PARTING SMILES

More than a score of applicants, their attorneys and witnesses gathered at 9 o'clock in the broad corridor from which opens the doors to the two courtrooms in which the divorce cases were being heard.

As the number of their cases was called by a bailiff, they disappeared within, a bit tense, reappearing within a few minutes smiling.

The 'big shot" in the divorce colony is Jack Dempsey. He is establishing residence to divorce Estelle Taylor, the motion picture star.

And conforming to the old copy book truism "Like Attracts Like," Which is to say that Jack Dempsey and Ruth Dodd are chummy. She divorced Bach, New York stock broker, over the week-end.

edge of its constitution, for it is too fundamental to have its constitution expressible in terms of anything else. (In other words we could no more understand the ether than a microbe in the ships cheese hog could understand a Diesel engine.) It seems to be analagous to a perfect incompressible field in a violent state of circulatory motion. Imperfectly conceivable as ultra-microscopic vortices circulating spinning with the velocity of light. (186,000 miles per second.)

"If the ether is constituted as I suggest, it must be the seat of enormous energy, not necessarily infinite, but far beyond any amount of which we have any conception.

"My speculation is that this boundless ether, thus full of energy, is utilized and is impregnated with something that may be called life and mind in excelsis, that is the home of the ideal and the supernal, and that all the life and mind we are conscious of is but an infinitesimal or residual fraction of this majestic or con-comitant of supreme mind."

Cold blooded physicists may call Sir Oliver's conjecture the shadow of a shadow "explaining the unknown by the unknown."

But the rebellious modern mind, not content with the Old Testament account of things, in the light of modern scientist, may find in Lodge's ether, an offset to Herbert Spencer's unpleasant word "ANNIHILATION."

VAUGHAN PROBE IN LAWRENCE

lice department, Inspector James J. Concannon and Special Officer Martin Conroy, were at the Vaughan home today. Under orders of Dist. Atty. William J. Foley, they checked telephone and telegraph calls sent out from and received at the house since the death of Mr. Vaughan.

Foley said he probably would present the Vaughan case to Suffolk county grand jury on Thursday and Friday.

LAWRENCE INQUIRY.

Dist. Atty. Cregg said Detective Griffin would begin at once to question depositors in the defunct Lawrence bank and would receive and act on any evidence forwarded to him from Middlesex or Suffolk counties.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank G. Volpe of Middlesex County said he planned to question today for the second time George W. Mastaglio, Jr., who, with Paul J. Cotter, fellow law student, shared Vaughan's Pinckney st. apartment.

Volpe instructed State Detective Edward J. O'Neil to bring Mastaglio to his office late this afternoon.

In the Supreme Court, Justice George A. Sanderson denied without prejudice a petition by the First Bankers' Union, Inc., for appointment of a receiver to take charge of the personal effects of Vaughan.

The petition was presented by Frederick D. Bonner, temporary receiver named by the Supreme Court to disentangle Vaughan's affairs. He believed he could obtain from Vaughan's personal effects evidence that would enable him to better administer the affairs of his receiverships.

Meantime the country-wide search for Vaughan, alleged to be short thousands of dollars in his accounts of five banking institutions, was continued.

MAY EXTEND TO EUROPE.

A search also was being made in Canada and the West Indies, with the possibility it may be extended to Europe.

Lieut. James Daley of Dist. Atty. Foley's office was still in Washington, in which city Vaughan was last reported.

Atty. George R. Farnum, counsel for the Vaughan family, was reported to have departed for Washington hastily. This departure gave rise to rumors that Vaughan was planning to surrender. It was understood that Atty. Farnum had originally planned to go to Washington on Wednesday on business not related to Vaughan's case.

Atty.-Gen. Warner said he hoped to have his report on the probe of Bank Commissioner Guy's office ready to turn over to Governor Ely by tomorrow or Wednesday.

Should the report be completed by Wednesday when the Governor's Council meets, the appointment of Guy's successor could be made by Governor Ely and placed before the Council immediately.

Kind Earthquake Aids Golfer to Shoot Hole in One

Manchester, Eng., May 4 (AP)—Its an ill earthquake for golfers that doesn't make a hole in one.

Death Sentence for Two Hired Killers

White Plains, May 4 (AP)—Guiseppe Caricari and Alfonse Carrato, who killed Giovanni Volpi, Manhattan laundry worker, last January, today were sentenced to die June 8 in the electric chair.

Volpi's wife, Rosina, and Joseph Carboneri, charged by the State with having contributed $500 to Caricari and Carrato for executing the crime, are awaiting trial.

EGYPTIAN RIOT UNDER PROBE

Cairo, Egypt (AP)—Nahas Pasha, leader of the Wafdist party, and a group of his followers were being questioned today by the attorney-general concerning a riot at Beni Suef in which a disputed number of persons were killed or wounded yesterday.

The ministry of interior reported that six rioters lost their lives and that three were wounded, as well as seven policemen, when police opened fire on a mob which had attacked them. A Wafdist spokesman said eight were killed and 45 hurt, in addition to the police casualties.

The visit of Nahas Pasha and six members of the executive committee to the home of a compatriot in Beni Suef was the occasion for the uprising.

NORWAY TO BAN WILKINS' DASH

London, May 4 (INS)—The Norwegian Government may take active measures to prevent Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins from making his projected journey to the North Pole in a submarine, it was stated in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Oslo today.

The message quoted the Oslo newspaper Arbeiderbladet as saying the Government considers the expedition an "unnecessary risk of human life."

If the Wilkins expedition calls at Norway en route to the pole, the dispatch said, the Government plans to enforce the regulations enabling it to exercise definite control over all Arctic expeditions

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 4 (INS)—The Arctic submarine Nautilus will undergo fresh water diving tests here today in the Hudson river.

'AUDACIOUS' LISTS 'MOST ELIGIBLE BACHELORS FOR LOVE'

'GIRLS GET 'EM YOUNG,' SAYS TATLER MAN

Writer, in Answer to "Love Is Grand," Says the Sterner Sex Grows More Shy

Once again "Audacious" has invaded, with pointed pen, the serenity of Boston's society circles—but this time the bachelors and matrimonial eligibles on the male side are his marks.

In Tatler and the American Sketch, the anonymous commentator on society and society folk has graded these male eligibles, just as he graded, some months ago, the Boston debs and college boys.

His latest observations are in purported answer to a letter, which he publishes and which reads:

"Dear Audacious:—You graded the Boston debs and the college boys, but would you mind giving us girls a break by publishing a list of eligible bachelors? Or must we girls grab off the college boys before they are old enough to reason with? It's all about? Love is grand!"

Well, my dear "Love is grand"!—You may be right. Love might be grand, and again it might not be. But to your answer, which I will put in my own unusual way. Are men becoming less and less inclined to march manfully up to the altar? So it would seem, and so many Boston girls think.

CATCH 'EM YOUNG.

In Boston where Harvard College furnishes the dancing men for the winter's festivities of the younger group (though be it said protestingly) the girls have fiances and a designing mother through three more years of college life, and finally, triumphantly, led to the altar within a day or so of his graduation from the seat of learning across the Charles, if not before! But this of which I now write has to do with the wary ones—the men who have escaped for several, perhaps ten or more years—the clutches of maidenhood to refix "Mrs." to their names—no, I did not say pining for these men, but will give the girls a break.

So here is a short list of Boston's most eligible bachelors:

CHANDLER BIGELOW: Harvard '24. Member of the exclusive Tavern Club, and, of course, of the Myopia Hunt; chairman of the Bachelors' Ball Committee of 1931.

HUGH WHITNEY: Son of Mrs. Elisha Flagg. Harvard '25. Somerset Club. Hard to please.

GIRL RUNAWAY STRAYS AGAIN

For the second time within a week, Eleanor King, 8, last night was returned to her home in West Eagle st., East Boston, after an all-day ramble undertaken without informing her parents.

Police of Station 7 found her, wrapped in two baby's blankets, sound asleep in the hallway of a house at 131 Putnam st., East Boston, at 11 o'clock last night.

Beyond telling the officers that she formerly lived in the Putnam st. house, the runaway at first refused to give the officers any information about herself. Finally she furnished them with her name and address and was taken home.

WELCOMED BACK

"Audacious," listing eligible bachelors in the Tatler, says Frederic C. Church, Jr., is received with open arms since Muriel Vanderbilt's divorce.

That's what "Audacious" says about Edwin S. Webster, Jr. "He's a real catch and heads Kidder - Peabody Co.," the writer adds.

Second Autopsy Proves Verna Russell Was Strangled

ANSWER TO PRAYER

Of John W. Watson, "Audacious" says "he is the answer to the maiden's prayer," but "he has given up his bachelor quarters for home."

"DRY LAW A CURSE"

"Audacious" says Russell S. Codman, Jr., so believes. "Given his time to the fire department since his divorce," the "love expert" adds.

"RICHEST BACHELOR"

"Audacious" declares John R. Macomber is "past his youth but is the State's richest bachelor; loves dogs and horses and is woman-shy."

NOT GIRL-SHY

Newell Bent, "Audacious" says, "is in Macomber's class, but isn't woman-shy, and is Boston's best looking, most fascinating widower."

NEW EVIDENCE FOR TRIAL OF HATHAWAY

Dr. George Burgess Magrath Will Be Star Witness Against Him

By JAMES J. SMITH

Newport, R. I., May 4—Although officials have closely guarded the fact, the Boston Evening American learned today the throat of Verna Russell was opened during the examination following the exhumation of the body last week, and it was established beyond doubt that death was due to strangulation.

It has been pointed out that the girl's throat was not opened at the first autopsy, but following conference with Dr. George Burgess Magrath, Rhode Island officials carried out this procedure, it was learned.

As a result, Dr. Magrath will, in all probability, be the star witness for the government against Elliott Hathaway charged with the girl's murder.

TEETH ALSO CHECKED

Although he entered the case some two weeks after its inception and his coming was unfavorably received by Rhode Island authorities, the Boston pathologist has proven himself a strong aid to their case. He has provided them with their best report that the girl's death was caused by strangulation, checked by the second examination.

The question of the girl's teeth, also carefully gone into in the second examination, bears out the contention that strangulation caused death. Any attempt of the defense to show that the girl's death was caused by liquor would be riddled by the prosecution, it is pointed out.

The autopsy report, first of all, shows there was no trace of liquor in the girl's stomach.

BODY'S CONDITION

Also there is no evidence to show that Hathaway purchased more than one pint of liquor on the night of the murder night up to the time he arrived at the home of Vernon Galvin, without the State. Tattle was about 11:15 and he had last been seen at about 8:00. He was apparently sober when he appeared at Galvin's home.

It was learned today that among the special pleas and motions to be filed by young Hathaway's attorney on Wednesday will be one to quash the indictment against him on technical grounds of irregularities in the grand jury proceedings.

It will be contended that although 22 persons were sitting on the grand jury only 21 signed the indictment. Further, it will be argued that when one of the women witnesses fainted, witnesses rushed into the grand jury room and that among them were those not authorized to enter. The defense will contend that the entire proceedings were irregular.

Sidney W. Harvey, clerk of the Newport Superior Court, to whom the indictments of first degree murder against Hathaway was delivered yesterday, today said that there was no truth in the statement by Hathaway's counsel that the signature of one of the grand jury members was lacking.

Harvey checked the list of signatures against the indictments and showed signatures of all 22 jurors.

35 BIG FOKKER PLANES BANNED

Washington, May 4 (AP)—Asst. Sec. Young announced today the Commerce Department, Aeronautics Division, had ordered discontinuance in passenger service of all Fokker T-10, AF-1 planes in use by four air lines.

The order affects approximately 35 transport planes and grew out of the investigation of the accident in which Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football coach and seven other persons were killed.

Young said the planes would not necessarily be kept out of passenger service but that the order was effective until certain matters of maintenance could be determined.

Anthony Fokker, designer, is here today for a conference with department officials regarding things that must be done to keep the planes in condition.

MAYOR RETURNS SEX FILM BAN

Expressing the opinion that the motion picture industry will shortly recognize the growing protest against sex and crime pictures, Mayor Curley today returned to the City Council, without approval, an order adopted last week to prohibit such pictures.

"The motion picture industry from the standpoint of money invested is today a ranking industry in America and unquestionably both those persons in charge of the industry and persons with money invested in it are desirous that such a course be pursued as will continue to merit for them not only public approval, but public support," the mayor wrote.

"Approval by me of the order as adopted by the City Council, even though I had the legal authority to do so, which I have not, would, in my opinion, be not only inadvisable but an injustice as I am quite certain that the motion picture industry must shortly recognize the growing protest against this character of presentations. In the event that they fail to do so after a reasonable time has elapsed, action as contemplated might be considered."

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

BIG TELEPHONE SALARIES HIT

A large part of the money received by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. in increased rates in 1923 has gone into salaries of officials at the top, Wycliffe C. Marshall charged today at a public utilities commission hearing.

The hearing was one of a series in connection with the Boston Central Labor Union's fight for lower telephone rates.

Several exhibits were introduced by Mr. Marshall to support his contention that the telephone company has been extravagant in its payroll.

In reply to a request of Mr. Marshall for additional information as to labor turnover by six months periods and official recommendations anu reasons for each salary increase to persons getting $5000 or more a year, Atty. George R. Grant, counsel, said the labor turnover could not be given in that form.

He said all information on the subject would be given, adding that salary increases are authorized by the directors or executive committee. He said salary increases were granted when merited.

Mr. Marshall said in 1921 the company employed 21 persons who received $5000 or more a year and that on Dec. 31, 1930, it employed 103 persons in the same class who received a total of $1,858,000 annually.

NOBLE QUIZZES GUARD ON TRIAL

Lawrence, May 4—Russell Noble, held for the hammer-slaying of Mrs. C. E. Ellis of Haverhill, is displaying interest in his own case for the first time since his arrest two months ago, it was learned today.

Following a visit Saturday night from his counsel, Atty. Richard J. McCormick, the youthful prisoner began to question guards concerning the convening of the grand jury and the possible date of his trial.

He was told the grand jury will convene at Newburyport next Monday, May 11, to adjourn as usual to Lawrence on Tuesday. Guards were unable to give young Noble any opinion as to when his case would be called.

On Sunday Noble was visited by his brothers, Bixby and James, and displayed a happy frame of mind to them. He laughed and joked with them and apparently enjoyed their visit.

Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg said he had heard nothing from the alienists who have been examining Noble, but believes that the examination must be about over.

Brand New Pump Wrecked on Way to First Fire

The Wellesley Fire Department had a brand new brush fire wagon delivered to it Saturday night.

Last night a brush fire off Wellesley ave. sent it on its first run. At Wellesley ave. and Brook st., Wellesley, the portable pump bounced out of the apparatus into the street. It was ruined. Firemen continued to the fire, however, and succeeded in putting it out with brooms.

BOY HERO GIVEN NEW RIFLE

Kansas City, May 4 (AP)—Bryant Untiedt, 13-year-old hero of the Towner, Col., school bus tragedy, is returning from a visit to the White House with manifest admiration for President Hoover and a new rifle, given him by Allan Hoover, the President's son.

"I had a wonderful time," he said when he arrived here by train last night. "The President was very good to me."

Within a neat canvas and leather case the lad carried the rifle, for hunting the coyotes and pheasants about his home.

Bryan was a guest today at the neighboring homes of Lou M. Holland, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and William H. Davenport, head of the secret service here, and will continue his journey home tonight.

RESCUER NEARS ARCTIC FLIER

Angmagssilik, Greenland, May 4 (AP) — Capt. Albin Ahrenberg, Swedish aviator, was within flying distance today of the tiny but on Greenland's ice cap where Augustine Courtauld, British explorer, has been marooned many months.

Ahrenberg flew here yesterday from Reykjavik, Iceland, in five hours, completing a dangerous flight in four stages from Malmoe, Sweden. Formation of ice on the wings of his plane prevented him flying on.

Ahrenberg's immediate destination is the main camp of the British expedition, 40 miles inland and then the meteorological station, 150 miles inland, where Courtland volunteered to spend the winter gathering data for a proposed air line to Canada. Ahrenberg plans to drop food for the explorer and possibly make a landing to bring him back.

HEIRESS 'LOST' FOR A PRANK

New York, May 4 (AP)—Police today were seeking Doris Dempsey, 15-year-old daughter of William W. Dempsey, Jr., wealthy York, Pa., lumberman.

She vanished April 22. Police were not asked to join in the search until private detectives advised the family to do so.

The girl's parents told police that Doris was probably off on a prank. They said she had about $50, and never complained of being unhappy at home. She was a popular pupil at the York Collegiate Institute.

U. S. Ruled by 2 P. C. of People, Declares Dr. Fosdick

New York, May 4 (AP)—The Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick says that, despite the United States' democratic form of government, 2 per cent of the people decide its questions of public policy.

An alert, organized minority has dominant influence in almost every direction—religious, political and economic—the pastor of the Riverside Church said in a sermon yesterday.

The history of the world, he declared, has been determined by the ideas and power of the minorities. He cited the power of a small group of Christians during the Roman empire and the struggle for American independence.

Trade Picking Up in Europe, Says Expert

New York, May 4 (AP)—Signs of clearing skies abroad are noted in the monthly business review of Dr. Stephen L. Miller, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, who expresses the hope that "they will be followed by fair weather here."

Among the "encouraging signs" cited by Dr. Miller are the improvement in political conditions in several disturbed areas. He adds that "not even the upheaval in Spain seems likely to produce serious disturbance."

Wealthy Ohio Man Reported a Suicide

Brockville, Ont., May 4 (AP)—J. Harold Hayden, 51, of Columbus, O., is reported by Canadian authorities to have committed suicide by slashing his left wrist with a razor, at Ivy Lea, Ont., in the Thousand Islands, where he spent the winter and spring. According to reports, Hayden was suffering from melancholia due to ill health.

LAND TAX FIGHT IS OPENED

London, May 4 (AP)—The opening skirmish in what is expected to be one of the bitterest political campaigns England has seen in many years began today when Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, moved his land tax resolution in the House of Commons.

It authorizes, for the financial year of 1933-34 and thereafter, a tax of one penny a year on each pound sterling of ascertained values of every unit of land in Great Britain.

"This resolution," the chancellor said, "asserts the right of the community to ownership of land, and declares private persons must not enjoy that privilege to the detriment of the common welfare."

"Votes! Bribery!" the Conservatives shouted, obviously taking the view that this proposal was a piece of class legislation designed to benefit the poor at the expense of the rich.

BIG TAX LOSS IN BAKER DEATH

New York, May 4 (AP)—Because George F. Baker died during business depression, the Federal government and the states in which he owned property stand to "lose" a fabulous fortune.

The amounts they will collect in inheritance taxes will be huge, but nowhere near as large as though the "Sphynx of Wall Street" had died during the boom period of 1929.

Guesses as to the wealth of the "third richest man in the country" range from $200,000,000 to $500,000,000 and even higher.

At the height of the bull market Mr. Baker's 22,000 shares in First National Bank received a paper valuation of $190,000,000. They are now quoted around $75,000,000. That shrinkage alone means a "loss" to New York state of something over $16,000,000.

The federal government gets its share of the estate after the states have taken theirs, allowing certain credits for taxes paid to states.

Not since the death of J. Pierpont Morgan 18 years ago has Wall Street lost a leader of the stature of George F. Baker, who died Saturday.

But the financial markets were unperturbed by his death, and there was a complete lack of the nervousness which prevailed when rebbins brought the news of the death of the elder Morgan in Rome in 1913.

PASTORS NAMED IN FLOGGING

Mena, Ark., May 4 (AP)—Two ministers were under indictment here today for flogging a man they accused of disregarding their warning to stay sober while the Red Cross fed his family last winter.

Sheriff Jesse E. Joplin said if they are convicted and fined, he will raise the money to pay the fines.

"I think it was a Christian act," he said.

The ministers, Rev. Sid Wise and Rev. P. R. Larimore, of the Apostolic Faith, have not been arrested. Wise, who is said by the sheriff to have confessed he whipped Bud Ralls last month, is in New Mexico holding revivals. He told officers if he were indicted he would return to face the charge. Larimore was permitted to remain at liberty on his own recognizance.

U. S. to Take Part in Wheat Parley

Washington, May 4 (AP)—The State Department today instructed the American legation at Ottawa to accept formally on behalf of the United States Canada's invitation for official participation in the international wheat conference at London, May 19.

Triple Funeral for Three Fire Victims

Belleville, Ont., May 4 (AP)—A triple funeral will be held tomorrow for the three young brothers who lost their lives when the barn in which they were "camping out" for the night burned yesterday.

Their mother, Mrs. Felix Rathotte, was in a state of collapse. The mooing of a cow sounded the alarm.

Vare and Doctor Plan Norway Trip

Philadelphia, May 4 (AP)—William S. Vare, Republican leader of Philadelphia, and his physician, Dr. Ellwood S. Kirby, contemplate a five-week vacation to Norway and Sweden. Dr. Kirby said today Vare is in good condition and well able to take the sea trip.

DO-X FINISHES SECOND LEG

Berlin, May 4 (AP)—Capt. Friedrich Christiansen, commander of the seaplane DO-X, sent word today that he had landed at Bolama, Portuguese West Africa, at 9 o'clock (10 a. m. E. S. T.) yesterday afternoon.

The message said the trip, which was one of the longest yet essayed by the Dornier plane, was without incident.

It had flown to Bolama from Villa Cisneros, in Spanish Rio De Oro, a distance of about 950 miles.

'BOTTLE IN BED' LEADS WIFE TO ASK DIVORCE

Testifying that her husband "even took a bottle to bed with him at times," Mrs. Grace Edgar sought a divorce in probate court at Salem today from Randolph Edgar, novelist and son of Chicago packer.

When not traveling the Edgars lived at Marblehead until recently, when the wife went to live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Welham of Minnesota, at their Cape Cod summer place.

TOOK BOTTLE TO BED

She charged her husband with gross habits of intoxication. Her suit was uncontested and Judge Alden P. White took it under consideration.

The couple were married in 1924 and according to Mrs. Edgar, his father supplied a generous allowance for them to live on. Young Edgar went to Marblehead to get local color for his novels.

"My husband was very successful with his writing until drink ruined him," testified Mrs. Edgar. "Last year he drank steadily and even took a bottle to bed with him at times.

BRILLIANT WHEN SOBER

"We made several trips to England and we recently returned from a trip around the world, and he was drunk on the boat and off of it."

Mrs. Edith Cann, proprietor of an inn at Marblehead, where the Edgars lived, testified that he was a very brilliant man when sober, but last summer he appeared to be intoxicated all the time.

JIM'S DAD ADVISES

Young "Jim," called his father on the phone and got him at the executive mansion in Albany.

"Say, dad," he exclaimed, "Charlie Hurley is being held up here on a big state loan and he won't stand for it. He wants to know how you are financing state loans in New York."

The fond and proud father, who is also a close friend of Hurley, revealed the terms and conditions of his son and concluded by saying, "I don't blame Charlie. Tell him to go to—(a New York banker, of prominence)—and tell him I want him to get the best terms possible for Charlie."

Hurley made reservations for himself and "Young Jim" on the afternoon train for New York and allowed State Street here to know he was going.

Shortly a representative of "the street" appeared at Hurley's office.

"What's the trouble with you and the banks?" he asked.

REFUSES TO BE HELD UP

"The trouble is not with me," snapped Hurley. "It's with the banks. I don't propose to let them hold the State of Massachusetts up or put a gun to my head.

"You see that fellow in the outer office. That's 'Jim' Roosevelt. His dad has made arrangements for me in New York. We're taking the afternoon train, and we're leaving now. When I borrow the money I'm going to leave it on deposit in New York. I'd much rather put it into the Massachusetts banks, but I'm going to favor those who favor the state."

The agent of "the street" presented his credentials of responsibility to act in the matter. He offered new terms while Hurley was putting on his topcoat to dash for the train. Hurley accepted them, and the state derived the lowest rate for a loan in many years.

That is why, if you happened to see them, the faces of State Treasurer Hurley and "Young Jim" Roosevelt were wreathed in smiles as they sat down to dinner together that night.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

"Circus Folks

Madison Square Garden about four weeks ago . . . The circus is there and, at the particular moment we are writing about, every eye in the huge arena is upturned, watching the Siegrist family furnish their thrilling aerial act which has been a feature of the Big Show for so many years . . . The last trick is completed and the aerialists are diving to the net . . . Charlie Siegrist, veteran of the Big Tops and father of the family, is the last to come down . . . He swings gracefully from the stand, back and forth, higher and higher and then, at the height of an up-swing, he lets go to do a triple somersault into the net . . . His foot catches in the rigging for a fraction of a second, but it is long enough to throw him off balance . . . He lands on his neck at the very edge of the net and then crashes to the floor . . . His neck is broken, and while his injuries are not fatal, he will never again be able to do his act . . .

Now the scene shifts to the Boston Garden . . . It is Friday night and the evening show is over . . . The crowds have left the building and the lights are dimmed . . . Suddenly, way down at one end of the arena, the lights flare up and a group of roustabouts set about rigging up the net . . . Four figures—slim, supple, erect—walk into the ring of light . . . Three boys and a girl in rehearsal clothes . . . They climb the rope ladder to the stand high up over the netting and their thin voices echo through the building . . .

While they are doing this we walk toward them to see who they are and to discover, if we can, what they are doing . . . We recognize Winnie Colleano easily and we turn to an attendant standing nearby. "Who are those boys up there with Winnie?" we ask. "Joe and Billy Siegrist and Jack Malloy," is the laconic reply . . .

Joe and Billy Siegrist, 17 and 18-year-old sons of Charlie Siegrist, dauntless sons of the Big Top. They and Winnie and Jack Malloy were planning to carry on the Siegrist aerial act. No one on the show thinks it is unusual . . . To them it is the thing to do . . . To them it is just part of the game—part of what it means to be called "circus folks."

Saturday afternoon the kids tried out their new act at the matinee . . . All of the folks on the show were watching them and pulling for them . . . The act started . . . the first two tricks were executed with all the finish of veteran performers . . . Even Diaz, the veteran aerialist who was watching them solicitously, nodded his head in approval . . . Then Joe tried a more difficult feat—and missed . . . He fell to the net unhurt and scrambled quickly up to the rope ladder and back to the rigging . . . But the damage had been done . . . The confidence of the kids had been shaken and they missed the next three tricks in rapid succession . . .

Back in their dressing rooms their first question was: "Did Mr. Ata (Mr. Ringling) see us?" "No," they were told, "He is going to watch your act tonight."

At the evening performances they went on and did the act without a single hitch—did it so well, in fact, that Diaz and Alfredo Codona, the king of all aerialists, came to their dressing room and set the seal of their approval on the act.

The Retort Grand

R. (Bostontranscript) Farnham sends along a classic about Jean Elwell (the Gloucester Times gal who was front-paged for being the first femme to watch the fishermen's races from the press boat—she donned men's togs, you remember).

Well, for a time Jean went to France and nightly wielded a water-pitcher at the Huntington ave. restaurant. She thought a place like that ought to be romantic until she discovered—an' it didn't take long—that to most people it was just another Childs. The disillusioned damsel comes up one night to a table occupied by four wisecrackers.

"Ah, here comes Circe!" was the first sparkler. "Circe was the cup-bearer of the gods, wasn't she?"

"No," scurled Jean, who knows her mythology, "That was Hebe."

"Hebe. That's right. What could's made me think it was Circe?"

"Possibly because Circe was the one who fed the swine!" cracked Hebe, exiting.

of this political instability may have been the result of immediate economic causes, we cannot ignore the malign inheritances from the great war. These political and social disturbances necessarily undermine that confidence on which economic life, both domestic and international, must thrive.

MILLIONS UNDER ARMS

"This is not an occasion for review of the action and interaction of a multitude of forces, but I do wish to give emphasis to one of these war inheritances in which international co-operation can effect a major accomplishment in reducing the 12½ burdens of the world, removing a primary cause of unrest and establishing greater confidence for the long future.

"That is the limitation and reduction of armament.

"The world expenditure on all arms is now nearly five billions of dollars yearly, an increase of about 70 per cent over that previous to the great war. We stand today with near 5,500,000 men actively under arms and 20,000,000 more in reserves.

"These vast forces, exceeding those of the pre-war period, still are to be demobilized, even though 12 years have passed since the armistice was signed, because of fear and of inability of nations to co-operate in mutual reductions.

"Yet we are all signatories to the Kellogg-Briand pact, by which we have renounced war as an instrument of national policy and agreed to settle all controversies by pacific means.

"Surely with this understanding, the self-defense of nations could be assured with proportionately far less military forces than these.

"This vast armament continues not only a burden upon the economic recuperation of the world, but, of even more consequence, the constant threats and fears which arise from it are a serious contribution to all forms of instability, whether social, political or economic.

"Endeavor as we must in support of every proposal of international economic co-operation that is just to our respective peoples, yet we must recognize that reduction of this gigantic waste in competition in military establishments is in the ultimate of an importance transcendent over all other forms of such economic effort.

"International confidence cannot be builded upon fear—it must be builded upon good will. The whole history of the world is filled with chapter after chapter of life's failure to secure peace through either competitive arms or intimidation."

LAND ARMAMENT.

The President made it plain that adequate national defense is not to be abandoned in the clashing of huge war machines. He pointed out that naval armaments have been considerably reduced, but that land armaments constitute a mighty burden in many foreign nations. He added:

"Within a short time the principal nations of the world will meet to discuss the broad questions of reduction in land armament. The very calling of this conference is in itself not only proof of need, but is an emphatic evidence of progress in the world demand for relief and peace.

"Of all proposals for the economic rehabilitation of the world, I know of none which compares in necessity or importance with the successful result of that conference.

"The United States has a less direct interest in land armament reduction than any of the large nations because our forces have been already demobilized and reduced more than all others. We have, however, a vast indirect interest in greater assurance of peace, order and the increased economic prosperity of other nations."

LAYS ILLS TO TARIFF

Liberal tariff policies and a throwing off of the feeling a business discouragement were prescribed as tonics or world trade ills by George Theunis of Belgium in an address following President Hoover.

M. Theunis, retiring president of the chamber, singled out high tariffs "as one of the fundamental causes of our actual economic troubles."

"But," he added, "the present depression itself has the effect of increasing the protectionists' temper of the various states.

"In company with many other business men I am convinced that "government's interference is most often useless and harmful, since it interferes with the free play of economic laws. These in the long run always assert themselves and the success which has attended certain instances of government intervention has only been temporary."

Man Who Gave Blood Free to 200 Drops Dead of Stroke

Philadelphia, May 4 (AP)—The blood of Howard N. Kennedy, which he shared in transfusions to save more than 200 lives, never will be used in another operation.

The 47-year-old World War hero, president of the Free Blood Donors' Association of America, dropped dead of a heart attack at his home here yesterday.

Estimates are that he gave his blood to more persons in transfusions than any other known man. And he gave it free.

In 1926, when former President Coolidge's father was dying in Vermont, Kennedy went there by airplane to offer his blood.

QUAKE IS FELT IN AMHERST

Dr. L. Don Leet, Harvard seismologist, said the station instruments recorded what was "possibly a local earthquake" at 5:07 a. m. today.

Because the station equipment is designed to record distant quakes only, Dr. Leet asserted it was possible to determine definitely if the record indicated a quake or merely the passing of a heavy vehicle in the vicinity of the station.

He was inclined to believe, however, that because of the hour and of reports from Amherst of a disturbance that it was a slight earth movement.

Amherst, May 4 (AP)—A distinct earthquake shock was felt in the northern part of this town at 5:17 a. m. today. It was reported that the tremor had a distinct eastwest movement and it was strong enough to shake houses and cause dishes to rattle.

Patrolman, Shot in Cafe Holdup, Dies

New York, May 4 (AP)—Policeman Bernard Sherry, who, off duty, prevented a restaurant holdup and killed one of the gunmen after being wounded, died yesterday as a result of his injuries. Police Commissioner Mulrooney said Sherry would get an inspector's funeral, and his widow his full salary as long as she does not marry.

MYSTERIOUS WAYE

CHAPTER 41

The Lost Jewel

DASHING SANTO Charters' vacant bedroom, as Marjorie and Sister Waldon waited safely out side the walls—I took his keys from beneath his pillow and rushed to his consulting room. Swiftly I unlocked a little desk in the upper part of his big desk, the part that, consisting of pigeon-holes and cupboards, rose up at the back of the leather-covered table part at which he wrote.

From a locked drawer in this cupboard I took another bunch of keys, among which was a small instrument shaped something like the blade of a screw-driver.

With one of these keys, I opened yet another little cupboard, and on the floor of this I discovered a neat round hole. Inserting the screw-driver blade, I soon found the head of a large screw, and withdrew it.

Having done this, I seized one end of the upper part of the desk in both hands, and swung it round on its hidden central axis, so that it stood across the desk at right angles to its usual position.

This exposed, at each end of the desk, an area that was covered by the back of the desk when in normal position.

In each of these horizontal areas was a keyhole. With one of the keys of the second bunch I unlocked and raised a flap that covered a box, of which it was the lid.

Poison!

In this cavity were a number of small bottles labled "Poison." From one containing a red powder, I withdrew the stopper, tipped out the contents, and exposed a small key.

With this I unlocked and raised the lid of the cavity on the right-hand side of the desk. This cavity also contained bottles, boxes, and tins. One of the latter, apparently a quarter-pound tobacco-tin that had never been opened, I removed and pocketed.

It contained my diamond. The Unsetting Sun.

My knowledge of its hiding-place was due partly to the skill, cleverness, courage, and persistence of Williams H. William, and partly to my own nightly prowlings, generally fruitless, behind the heavy curtain that had served me so well on the first day of my visit to the Monastry.

I had recovered my diamond, now more to me a symbol of success than a thing of intrinsic value. My diamond—that had cost me Rosemary's life—and yet had saved Marjorie's.

I had triumphed over my enemies and had seen the worst and vilest of them die at my feet like a poisoned dog.

I had found Love—and with it Faith, Hope and Charity—for I had found Marjorie.

Lost Her

And in the same hour I lost her, or rather, learned that I had found her too late.

Perhaps suffering does—as poets and moralists have sung and said—act upon the human mind as does the furnace fire upon the earthly ore.

Perhaps pain and sorrow and suffering are good, and it is true that we emerge from them, if emerge we do, stronger and braver and better. I don't know.

But I do know that I was able to meet this fresh blow as a man should and to stand up to it, and while standing up to it, conceal its terrible effects.

Or, again, of course, it may be that I had received so shattering a blow when Rosemary met her dreadful fate, that my mind and soul had lost some of their capacity for suffering.

Anyhow—Marjorie was engaged to be married—a fact the possibility of which had positively never entered my mind.

I had had so much else of which to think that I had almost visualized her as having no outside relationships save with her weak, worthless uncle and his infamous wife.

Marjorie was engaged to be married. Her fiance was in India. She would shortly be of age, and she wished to go out to him.

So be it. I would take her and see her safe into his care.

For three weeks I should be continually in her company. In that time I would find out something about her lover, and, at the end of it, I would meet him and sum him up.

The Voyage

If Marjorie loved him, doubtless he was worthy.

But did she love him—or was it a boy and girl affair? Well . . . I should have that three weeks. Three weeks of Paradise ineffable, and, if it must be, "Paradise now."

How shall I tell of that voyage?

I cannot if I would. Like Dante, I have been in Heaven, but I am no Dante to tell of it.

It lasted for a moment. It lasted for years—21 wonderful days, each of which was a year—each filled with wonderful and innumerable happenings of indescribable and unimaginal loveliness, joy and glory; a smile upon Marjorie's lovely lips; a happy laugh, the sweetest music in this world; a pressure of loving hands upon my arm as we walked the moonlit deck . . . For they were loving hands. Marjorie loved me, I'm sure, and, but for her cousin, might have fallen in love with me. I wholly believe.

But who was I, gray, frim and battered—although scarce 40 years of age—a hunted convict with a price upon his head? Who was I that I should make love to Marjorie Lauderdell?

One of the few things to which, in reviewing my life, I can look back with satisfaction, is the fact that loving, worshiping, adoring her as I did, I was able to refrain from making love to her. But I love to know that Marjorie loved me, and I love to think that, in happier circumstances, she might perchance have fallen in love with me, and loved me indeed as I loved her.

There is much of love in this last sentence. Well, it is better than hate, and so, thanking Marjorie and God, let me end upon that note.

THE END

Notes and Gossip About People You Know

GARDENER APPOINTED

Five men have been appointed permanent gardeners in the park department by Mayor Curley. They: Patrick J. Burke of 29 Colonial ave., Dorchester; Henry P. McCoy of 123 Birch st., Roslindale; Hugh McNamee of 19 Weld st. Forest Hills; Thomas J. Costello of 18 St. Peter's st., Jamaica Plain, and Michael F. Finucane of 221 Blue Hill ave., Roxbury.

SULLIVAN GIVEN VIOLIN

The strains of Irish and Italian melodies filled the air at the home of John A. "Deacon" Sullivan of Mayor Curley's office yesterday after he had been presented with an antique violin by Louis Barrasso also of that office. The violin has been an heirloom in the Barrasso family for four generations. John is an accomplished violinist, and Louis, who is not a musician himself, decided to present the instrument to him.

CURLEY MENTIONED

It is rumored about City Hall that Edward Jackson Curley of Brampian Way, Dorchester, who represented the dental supply business on the Tercentenary celebrations committee last summer, will be a candidate for City Council from ward 13. The district is now represented by Joseph McGrath, president of the City Council, who will be a candidate for re-election.

BUCKLEY IS APPOINTED

Joseph M. Buckley of 1224 Blue Hill ave., Mattapan, has been appointed a permanent sewer inspector in the city public works department.

KELLY APPOINTED

The overseers of the public welfare today announced the appointment of William Kelly of 23 Johnswood rd., Roslindale, as night engineer.

LODGE STATUE ACCEPTED

The Governor and council rejected the model of a statue to the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, but accepted the statue itself after they had viewed it. In this case there was a vast difference between the two.

PRESS CARDS SOUGHT

A suggestion of Sergeant-at-Arms Charles O. Holt that the legislative reporters be furnished with badges for identification purposes has been met with the counter proposal that press cards be issued instead.

COTE ENJOYS POSITION

Probably no member of the Governor's Council enjoys his work more than Councillor Edmond Cote of Fall River. In his election to that body, Mr. Cote realized a life ambition.

THE MARTHA LEE EVENING AMERICAN COOKING PAGE

Specials for Electric Ice Box

By MARTHA LEE

"I'm wondering whether an electric refrigerator will be worth the many small sacrifices I'll have to make to buy one," writes a March bride, who was graduated from our mid-winter cooking class. And though I don't believe in buying a single piece of kitchen equipment that can't earn its board and keep either in the saving of time, strength or money, I am writing Mrs. M. S. T. that if she can possibly manage it I know she'll find an electric refrigerator a pride and joy forever, as well as an efficient guardian of your food supply and a real money saver.

Martha Lee

To some the chief attraction of an electric refrigerator is the convenient ice cubes and delicious desserts, salads and what-nots that can be prepared in the trays, but to me one of the things I love my electric refrigerator best for is the saving of time that I used to spend in the daily trips for supplies and in the money that I used to unavoidably waste in throwing out leftovers that would not keep long enough to be used to advantage.

WEEK'S SUPPLY

With an ordinary size electric refrigerator, two trips a week to the market are all that are really necessary and some of my friends have selected refrigerators large enough to store an entire week's supply. Butter and eggs and fresh fruits and vegetables all keep sweet and fresh for more than a week and milk and cream and meats will keep for four or five days and often for a week on the bottom shelf. Less from leftovers has been entirely eliminated in the Lee family and whether the season is summer, winter, spring or fall, there are endless delectable dishes which are prepared to perfection in an electric refrigerator.

Luscious gelatine desserts which used to mean hours of waiting for them to chill are the work of but ten minutes in an electric refrigerator in your home, and with warm weather getting nearer every day what joy to think of chilled chicken bouillon, for instance, instead of a hot dinner soup serving, or a molded salmon and cucumber salad. Or a lettuce surprise which is truly new and different.

LETTUCE SURPRISE

Select a solid, perfect head of lettuce. Slice off the top, and carefully hollow out the inside. Fill the cavity with the mixture given below, and replace the top. Then prepare the gelatine base. When the gelatine starts to congeal, place the head of lettuce in a large mold and pour gelatine carefully around it. Place in electric refrigerator for several hours until set. To serve turn out on a bed of lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise and radish roses.

FILLING FOR LETTUCE

1 cup cooked meat, chopped fine and seasoned
½ pimiento, chopped
½ cup bread or cracker crumbs
Milk or cream

Mix the meat, pimiento and crumbs, and moisten with a little milk or cream. The mixture should be rather highly seasoned. (Potted or canned meats are excellent for this purpose). Fill the head of lettuce with this mixture.

GELATINE BASE

2 tbsp. gelatine
½ cup cold water
6 tbsp. mild vinegar
2 tbsp. lemon juice
3 cups boiling water
½ cup sugar
1 tsp. salt

JUST TRY THIS QUICK AND EASY MACAROON PUDDING

This vanilla dessert powder is stirred into the milk and a custard made.

Oven Glass Has Feature Role in School

Members of the Martha Lee Cooking School often commented on the attractive appearance given to a large proportion of the dishes through the use of oven glassware. For instance, in this week's lesson the Baked Shoulder was baked in an oven glass Utility dish, the Stuffed Peppers in an oven-glass Casserole, the Sunflower Sweet Potatoes in an oven-glass pie plate and the Parsnip Puffs in oven-glass custard cups.

UTILITY COVERS

The latest arrival to this oven-glass family is a casserole with a new utility cover, which can be used as a separate baking dish or as a pie for hot dishes. This flat cover makes it possible to stack another dish on top of the casserole in the oven when baking an oven-cooked meal, and it also is helpful in saving refrigerator or pantry storage space.

The Tea Pot is quite the cleverest we've seen in many a blue moon. It has no spout and an unbreakable handle! Ten-time beginners a delightful adventure with this new oven-glass heat-proof glass tea pot. It's really a magic bubble of shining glass, crystal clear and sheer, but long-lived and luminous to heat or cold. It's made of the self-same heat resisting glass that bakes food in high oven heat for hours and then does double duty in your refrigerator.

OLD-TIME SPOUT GONE

Perhaps I'd better explain about the absence of the old-time spout, such a treacherous snare for faucets and careless fingers. Instead a graceful opening in the gleaming, chromium lid and a special curb on the pitcher-lip makes it possible to pour the tea easily and evenly and save you many worries. The fragile handle of old-fashioned teapots has been replaced with one of gleaming chromium too. You can pour boiling water into this new heat-resisting glass teapot as you can fill it with water from the faucet and boil it right in the teapot on a hot plate, if you prefer, making sure of course that no flame touches the glass above the water level. Then hang a teaball from the little hook on the under side of the cover and close the cover, letting the teaball steep. Then sit back and watch, and through the transparent glass you can see when the tea has reached just the right strength. Do drop in and ask Jean to show this teapot to you the next time you are in the neighborhood. It is worth a special trip.

Spring Salad

A SPRING SALAD which combines fruits and vegetables and costs only 25 cents to serve six persons is Jellied May Salad—it is good any month in the year. Dissolve one-half package of orange gelatine in two-thirds cup boiling water, cool, add one-half cup No. 2 can of crushed pineapple and one-half cup of ground raw carrot. Pour into wet molds or into the refrigerator trays. Let as and chill thoroughly. Turn out on crisp lettuce and top with mayonnaise.

Pudding Made of Macaroons Delicious

Next time you're hard put to think of what to make for your dinner dessert, try the Macaroon Pudding that's illustrated on this page today, and I'll guarantee that you'll be making it again within a week—by "popular request."

It's an easy pudding and awfully good—and best of all is economical, since instead of a lot of expensive ingredients, we use for its foundation a package of the delicious 5c dessert powder that makes such a smooth, rich and delicious cream. We use this powder—which comes in a variety of luscious flavors—as a foundation for ice cream, dessert, ice box cake, cake filling, tart filling, floating island and what-have-you.

It only takes a minute to dissolve the package of vanilla flavored powder in ½ cup cold milk, as you see the young lady doing in the picture. To this we added 1½ cups of hot milk and stirred in a double boiler until it came to a boil. Then the mixture is taken from the stove and one beaten egg is added, and the cream cooked just another minute longer, stirring constantly.

Make sure that you don't overcook the mixture after the egg is added, or it may curdle. Meanwhile, the macaroons—which can be stale ones—are rolled and added to the cream mixture, saving some of the crumbs to sprinkle over the tops of the glasses. We pour this mixture into our best sherbet glasses and then set them on a tray in the electric refrigerator to cool till serving time.

Dearest Anne:

What a perfectly glorious time we had at Polly's tea! Did Jean tell you about it? Well, it seems that Polly's funny little Country Club opened up last week—and Polly, being one of the Mighty Ones on staffs and committees and things, felt it her duty to entertain—which she did—grandly. All our friends were there looking too smart for words in their new Spring sport togs—and my! how the gossip did fly. I have tried to remember snatches of it to tell you. So curl up in a chair while I give you the news that's abroad this week.

Behold the New "Signal" Sport Handkerchiefs!

After years of monotonous simplicity in handkerchiefs—these intriguing, utterly delightful "hankies" at Filene's Handkerchief Shop will surely add glamour to your sport and street costumes. And can you think of anything more dashing to accent your Spring wardrobe with than this new set, pay note of color—It's smart—It's feminine—It's adorable! They're pure linen, with hand-rolled hems and in the desirable large sport size. But the colors, Anne! I simply couldn't try to describe them except to say they're the most attractive color combinations I've ever, ever seen—extremely vivid and utterly adorable—and they're only $1 each! Redingote and Soft Dress of Wool

By ANN ARDEN

GIVEN A chance, the dress of light wool has proved its right to be loved. Women who declared they never could wear wool are stepping out in this new type of frock just as if they never heard of such a thing. They didn't know the quality and the fineness and above all the utter moldishness of the material, then there is something about one of these newer wool dresses that has such a very tailored look about it.

THE REDINGOTE is a good choice for travel and general wear, because it so happily achieves a coat and dress combination. It also permits indulgence in the increasingly popular color contrast idea.

A REDINGOTE of flattering lines, and challenging competition with any coat or suit is the one pictured, of brown light-weight wool. The back has straight, princess line, a bolero emerges from each side, it is belted center front, and the sleeves have link fastening at wrist. The frock is of green wool, sprinkled in square dots of brown; is sleeveless, has scarf collar and tie, and group of inverted pleats center front and back from deep hip yoke. The brown felt hat has its upturned brim held at center front with feather fancy. This versatile redingote may do duty over other frocks of print or plain silk, so proved a boon as an extra travel costume, or for dashing away over the week-end.

WHETHER YOU are blonde or brunette there are shades of brown that you can wear. One of the newest color combinations for resort wear features this wearable hue with yellow. One brown sports coat is combined with a suit of yellow tweed, a clever use of the two colors and a new version of the four-piece suit that also illustrates the trend away from obvious and careful ensembling.

* * *

WHETHER straight lines would start returning to importance again is now definitely answered by more than one suggestion of straightness in the new clothes. Pleats are one of the best guide posts along the way—more and more of them are being seen in place of the flares of a season past. This will be a welcome return to many of us.

Alice Jay Will Wed Vivian Harcourt

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

New York, May 4 (US)—These are busy days, matrimonially speaking, for the direct descendants of John Jay, first chief justice of the United States and a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Not quite three weeks have elapsed since the formal announcement of the betrothal of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Jay's daughter, Luiza, to Impre De Vegh of Budapest, Hungary; and over the week-end I learned that the young couple will don the matrimonial harness on Friday afternoon of this week.

And less than three weeks after Luiza and Impre have been made as one in the presence of a distinguished gathering of members of the "old guard," the same highly placed personages assemble in St. James' Episcopal Church in this city to witness the union of Luiza's cousin, Alice Jay, daughter of the John Clarkson Jays of 121 E. 54th st., and Vivian Wilshire Harcourt. Alice and Vivian having chosen the afternoon of May 27 for their wedding.

The ceremony which will make Luiza and Impre as one will be solemnized at the Jay home, 755 Park ave.

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet, it is not at all necessary. Gray hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair!" And—that is on the shelf.

This penalty need no longer handicap the woman who uses Canuta Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restores hair to its original girlhood color. No complicated "color plan" no danger of getting brunette shade when your hair is blonde. Not only the one kind but the one bottle is enough. It really is surprising what successful, youthifying results it gives.

Apply Canuta Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist—and get rid of the "age penalty" in gray hair. Canuta Water is so safe, so scientific and sure that your dealer knows it will satisfy you; if not he will refund your money. Sold and recommended by Noughton & Dutton, Epstein Drug Co., or your own druggist.—The Canuta Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—Adv.

BLANCHE SWEET VAUDEVILLE HIT

Favorite of Millions at Boston

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

That darling lady of the lights and shadows, fascinating in the old days of the silent screen, and very good in what she has done in the talkies—none other than Blanche Sweet, folks—is here in this flesh-and-blood. Just as fascinating, too, in person, as fans just knew she must be. Very clever, too. Miss Sweet is the headliner this week at the RKO Boston, appearing in dramatic lines which mirror her to us as actress who should get better roles in the talkies when she gets back to Hollywood after her swing about the big-time circuits.

Dorothy Lee

Not only is the film favorite of millions a most attractive lady, but she has striking personality and real histrionic ability. There in she is far better than some screen stars who have attempted vaudeville. She is worth seeing and hearing; doubtless, her admirers will keep the Boston jammed during her stay here.

The Boston variety bill is generally excellent. For one of the brightest there is the sparkling comedienne, Violet Carlson, known to musical comedy patrons and now evoking great merriment by her miming in vaudeville. Other good acts are those of the Signor Friscos and his snappy orchestra, Kirby & Duval and Bud sing Francis Craig.

On screen is a light story with a great many laughs. Its title is "Laugh and Get Rich"; its story is no world-beater, but the actors put it over in peppy fashion, notably Hugh Herbert, who turns in a splendid characterization, and Edna May Oliver in her comedy effort. Though the star is the cute Dorothy Lee, the honors all go to the veteran actors in the film. Among others in the cast are Russell Gleason, Johnny Harron and Robert Emmett Keane.

LOVE OVER THE COUNTER

Jean Harlow and Clark Gable supply much of the heart interest in "The Secret Six," at the Loew's State this week.

Film Who's Who

Constance Cummings, who plays a role opposite Jack Holt in "The Last Parade," now at the Bowdoin Sq, before entering pictures played in "The Little Show," "This Man's Town" and "June Moon" on the New York stage. She went to Hollywood to play a lead opposite Ronald Colman. Plans for filming the picture were eventually abandoned. Undaunted, she transferred her services to Columbia Pictures and from that time on fortune smiled upon her.

Constance Cummings

War Feature on Twin Screens

At the Beacon and Modern is "The W Plan," a war story. It deals with the operations of the British Intelligence Office and its efforts to smash the W Plan which consists of a series of underground galleries reaching behind the British lines. The German forces plan to burrow their way behind the lines and then attack. The fantastic plot is realistically pictured.

The film has for its leading characters two players of stage experience, Brian Ahern and Madeleine Carroll. Other prominent roles are portrayed by Gibb McLaughlin, Gordon Harker, Milton Rosener.

The co-feature, "Too Young to Marry," with Loretta Young and Grant Withers, is a comedy romance telling of the adventures of an impetuous girl and a blundering boy in the fight for happiness.

Pops Season Opens This Week

The Pop concerts will open their 46th season next Wednesday night in Symphony Hall. Arthur Fiedler announces program for this night and the remainder of the week, mingling past favorites with new numbers of interest. On Sunday, May 10, will be the first Sunday night program, which is to be divided between English composers and the music of Tchaikovsky.

Arthur Fiedler

Lambert's "The Rio Grande" with Sanroma as pianist, and the Cecilia Society Chorus assisting, will be a feature of this concert as well as the new "Pomp and Circumstance" March No. 5 which, just written by Sir Edward Elgar, was recently first performed in his own country. Fiedler will also revive his Fifth Symphony of William Boyce, the 18th century British composer.

The program of the first night follows:

Wednesday, May 6—Hungarian March, "Rakoczy," Berlioz; Overture to "Oberon," Weber; Minuet (for string orchestra), Boloni; Fantasia, "Carmen," Bizet; Tales from Johann Strauss, Korngold; Londonderry Air, Harty; "Les Preludes," Symphonic Poem No. 2, Liszt; "Gigi Crazy," selection, Gershwin; Czardas from the Opera, "Ghost of the Warrior," Grossman; The Ride of the Valkyries, Wagner.

Bowdoin Square

At the Bowdoin Square the top picture is "The Last Parade," with Jack Holt in the role of Cookie Leonard, a wire-cracking gangster who is known to the underworld followers as a hard-boiled rockcrusher.

A companion picture is "Millie." The seven vaudeville acts include Lem McMoon, master of ceremonies; Kitajama Japs, Alexander and Elmore, Lang Brothers, Evelyn Lewis, Silver Slippers and Myra Duo. On Wednesday comes Cabaret night with extra vaudeville.

By HARRIS MORGAN

"Dirigible," a thriller from the Columbia studios, will be given a notable premiere at the Majestic tonight. A large number of prominent persons, including officials and film folk, are announced as expected to be in the audience. A "Hollywood First Night" is the phrase used by those in charge of the event; and movies are to be made of patrons tonight by the East Coast Sound studios.

* * *

The photoplay is declared by those who have seen it, to be a realistic and gripping drama of the air. Columbia had government aid in the production and announces "Dirigible" is the greatest picture its studios have yet turned out. Which means that the film should be a topnotcher, as Columbia has been making some mighty good ones. The male leads in the new picture are Jack Holt and Ralph Graves, with the exceedingly gifted Frank Capra handling the directorial end. The feminine interest is the work of Fay Wray.

Jack Holt

"The principal characters, Jack Bradon and "Frisky" Pierce, are played by Holt and Graves. Bradon is the commander of a navy dirigible and Pierce is the navy's foremost flying ace—a daredevil for whom no risk is too great. Miss Wray plays the role of Pierce's wife.

The plot swings into action when Rondelle, an English explorer, who has attempted several times to reach the South Pole over the ice, conceives the idea, at Navy Day celebration, of making the trip by dirigible. Bradon is to pilot the expedition and Pierce is to accompany them. Helen, Pierce's wife, appeals to Bradon, who secretly loves her, to prevent Pierce's participation.

Left behind, Pierce nurses a grudge and when the dirigible fails to accomplish its purpose he persuades Rondelle to permit him to fly him over the Pole in his plane. Reaching the Pole their plane crashes and rescue is eventually made by Bradon in a new and improved type of dirigible. Bradon in the air and in bringing together again Pierce and the woman both love for a dramatic climax.

Mr. Schwartz will stay in Boston one week starting tomorrow. For Friday, Saturday matinee and evening he will play "Riverside Drive."

Tolstoy's Gem at Fine Arts

The Cast

Fedia	V. Pudovkin
Lisa	Maria Jacobini
Nacha	Vera Gordon
Anna Pavlowa	Diana Karenne

Marie Kerenin	Gustav Diessl
The "Lady"	W. Maretzkaia
Attendant	D. Wedekind
Prince Kow	S. Wassil

The Fine Arts screen, gay and merry and panoramically enchanting for some weeks, turns sombre with the current showing of a Russian film, "The Living Corpse," from Tolstoy's story "Redemption." The picture will appeal to those who like all Slav movies, or who wish to see how the Moscow actors enact the roles in a plot which has been done by Hollywood.

A year or so ago Jack Gilbert, Conrad Nagel and Eleanor Boardman made this story into a mediocre talking picture, and fans may recall the theme which dealt with the pretended suicide of a worthless husband who removed himself from the scene that his wife might marry a deserving rival. Years later the deception is discovered and all hands are arranged on a bigamy charge. But the husband makes a last gallant gesture, saving the situation by actually killing himself.

The original Tolstoy play has been considered a classic of murky drama, and the leading role has been played by the world's finest actors. But the play itself is a loquacious piece and its chief values rest merely in the lines Tolstoy put in the mouths of his characters.

As is frequently true of these Russian productions, the direction is interesting.

The film itself, however, is heavily depressing.

John Wayne to Head Cast for "Arizona"; Given Long-Term Contract

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor for Universal Service

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, May 4.—Old Doc Cohn takes these players when they aren't doing so well at other studios and puts them on a prescribed diet. John Wayne, who was at bit of a disappointment to the Fox company after "The Big Trail," has just been signed by the intrepid Harry Cohn on a five-year contract.

Young Wayne's first picture for Columbia will be "Arizona." The boy has probably learned a lot since his first picture for he made it without one minute's experience. Mr. Cohn took Constance Cummings after she had failed to register as Ronald Colman's leading woman in her first picture and we did not think so much of her but her second was Louella O. Parsons much better and she has been improving ever since.

THE BELOVED Knute Rockne will not be forgotten. Although he died before he was able to act in the four stage subjects he wrote before his death his stories will be produced by Universal as he wrote them. Furthermore, they will be called "The Spirit of Notre Dame" and Carl Laemmle, Jr., says that they will be dedicated to the memory of Mr. Rockne. The full co-operation of the Notre Dame authorities will provide the background for a story dealing with college life. Naturally Notre Dame's success year after year in the football world will be featured. Albert Kelley is at Notre Dame making the four subjects which Knute Rockne wrote and Richard Schayer is working at Universal City on the screenplay for "The Spirit of Notre Dame."

NO PLAY in years has had as big a success as "Elizabeth the Queen." It also went over big in New York, where Lynn Fontanne created the role of Queen Elizabeth on the stage. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, I hear on very good authority, has purchased this play which took Norwell Anderson four years to write. Another interesting angle to the story is the report that Lynn Fontanne and her husband, Alfred Lunt, who have been negotiating with M-G-M for some time, will come to Hollywood to play their original roles.

PERHAPS THE name Terry Ray doesn't mean anything to you, but it is of interest to Hollywood for he is the chap whose engagement has been announced to Fifi Dorsay. Fifi has been admired by many others. There is something about her that most people like, a spontaneity and a gayety that is never lacking. Returning to the subject of Terry Ray he will play the "heavy" in Buster Keaton's next picture, "Sidewalks of New York." Anita Page will add the feminine interest, while Zion Myers and Jules White are the directors.

Maureen O'Sullivan, who talks with more of an English accent than Irish, is slated to do "The Brat," the play in which Maude Fulton made such a hit on the stage.

Gets the Big Kick Out of the Stage

By GEORGE M. COHAN

I always get a kick out of show business. No matter whether I am in it or out of it, I get the kick just the same. That seems paradoxical but it isn't.

When I am active either as a producer or as a player I am in it with a whole-heartedness for the fun there is in it and the friendships I make. For now-days with the changing times in the theatrical world many of the theatres I have played season in and season out have changed hands, and there are new faces about the old theaters. And it is a great pleasure to meet and make new friends. Also, too, there are the chances for the renewals of old friendships.

For instance, here in Boston, I am always glad to play here just for the opportunity to meet up with Frank Archer, Supt. Crowley, Tom Lothian, Al Sheehan, Denny Shea and the hundreds of others I call friends.

And when I am out of show business I get the same kick out of it. For then I sit back and hear the gang moan and groan about where the business is heading.

The truth of the matter is that there is nothing the matter with show business. All it needs is a kick to get it started. And believe me, I am going to give it a good-sized one this time. "Friendship," my new show, is a starter with a big surprise coming shortly.

What $16,000 buys in The American Weekly

A full page in color more than twice the size of any other magazine page in the world . . . 5,500,000 families at a cost of less than ½ cent per family . . . The attention of the entire family instead of a single buying factor.

That is the highest price per page asked by any magazine publisher in the world.

But the advertiser who stops to analyze that cost soon comes to the realization that it is the greatest bargain on the entire publishing counter.

For $208,000 he can buy a full page in four colors every fourth week throughout the year and merchandise his wares thirteen times during the year to 5,500,000 prosperous families who live in the richest buying areas of this country.

These pages, which are more than twice the size of any other magazine page, give him full opportunity to tell his whole story in word and illustration.

The great economy of The American Weekly as an advertising medium quickly becomes apparent when its cost is reduced to the common denominator of the two-cent stamp.

If the advertiser were to mail each of these thirteen color pages to each of the families reached by this mighty magazine the postage bill alone, for a year, would be 26¢ per family —or $1,430,000 in all.

Yet, through the medium of The American Weekly he can address 5,500,000 families every four weeks throughout the year with a great color-page advertisement at a cost of less than two 2¢ stamps per family reached.

When you realize the economy and the power of this great magazine; when you realize that no other magazine in all the world can offer so much for so little—then you will understand why, even in times like these, The American Weekly continues to forge ahead year after year.

To give some idea of the coverage of this mighty magazine, let us analyze its circulation.

The American Weekly concentrates and dominates in 579 of America's 997 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over. (1930 U. S. Census figures.)

In each of 154 cities, it reaches one out of every two families

In 107 more cities, 40 to 50% of the families

In an additional 147 cities, 30 to 40%

In another 171 cities, 20 to 30%

. . . and, in addition, nearly 2,000,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy The American Weekly.

Where can you spend your advertising dollar more effectively?

Cock-A-Doodle-Doo

The American Weekly advertising revenue and linage for the month of April was greater than for any April in its history, and is greater for the first four months of 1931 than for the first four months of any year in its history.

BABE RUTH AS I KNOW HIM

FROM ORPHAN BOY TO NATIONAL IDOL

By Michael H. Crowley
Supt. of Boston Police

"SUPER" RUTH AT CROWLEY'S DESK

(C) 1931, by the Boston Evening American

It seems odd to be writing for the reading public when so often I have been the subject instead of the author. And now, partially, I am both.

With all apologies to Babe Ruth—he is a large subject. I hope I can do him justice, because from what I hear I know he has done nothing but well for me wherever he has gone.

It's been many years now since I started police work, and I've met a lot of men and women in that time. (Some of them didn't want to meet me, even though I didn't amount to so much before I had the old stripes.)

However—of all the distinguished personages with whom I have come in contact in my years of police, and, therefore, semipublic work, I can think of no individual who can say more truthfully that he has achieved more in life's satisfactions—starting with nothing—than Babe Ruth.

And he is still an enthusiastic ♦ about living, about playing and about working as on the first day I met him. That's a long time ago. You might put it down as in the days when he was a left-handed pitcher and used to hike alone across the Fenway from Peterboro st., where he had an apartment, to Frazee's ball park two blocks in a short walk if the Babe was in a peaceable frame of mind.

Babe a Hitch-Hiker
Gives Crowley the Finger

However, if Ruth knew he was due to go in and pitch that day he might make it a dozen or more blocks by swinging over through the Fens as far as Massachusetts and Huntington aves., and then west by the old American League park, picking up some of the boys at the old Putnam Hotel on the way.

It was on a day that he wasn't due to go in there when Arthur met him. That was seven years before Johnny Igoe really took up with the Babe, and on this day the big fellow was swinging across the Fenway all by himself.

Arthur was driving through the Fenway when the gangling fellow gave him the finger—they call it thumbing now—and Arthur stopped the car and took him aboard. Arthur recognized Babe from his newspaper pictures, but naturally the Babe didn't know Arthur, and Arthur had no reason for telling him that Arthur's dad was a brand new superintendent of police in Boston.

It might be a better story to say that the Babe pitched that day—and won—with Arthur watching from a choice seat. But the fact is that Babe didn't even play, and Arthur did not go to the game.

In fact it was several years later when my real acquaintance with Babe, and Arthur's real acquaintance with him, occurred, and it was not until after he had been sold to the Yankees in the winter of 1919-1920 that I learned that he had a bug to be a detective.

The Babe was very bitter about being sold off by Frazee, and with all due respect to those that have passed, I believe he was right. Babe had been paid, on a three-year contract, $5,000 a year, and at the end of the 1919 season—that was when he made his first home-run surge—he demanded $15,000 a season. Frazee granted him $10,000 a year, which he did not have to pay, because while Frazee raised the salary with one hand, he held Babe with the other.

Trade Peeves Ruth
Slugger Visits Headquarters

Well, anyway, Babe was good and sore all around, because he liked Boston and had lots of fun here. While the Polo Grounds, which the Yankees then used with the Giants, were practically built for him and aided his home-run record greatly with the short fences, it took a long time for the Babe to get over being sold.

It was when the Yankees first swung into Boston in the 1920 season that I learned actually of the Babe's leaning toward crime detection and of his interest in criminology. It came out then that he and Tris Speaker—on many a night when the other boys of the Red Sox were at a show, or playing cards, or watching the fights somewhere—well, the Babe and Tris would be tramping through the streets of the Back Bay or waiting in some alley, with a couple of pistol-toting men or special officers playing at being detectives, but having the satisfaction of knowing that two genuine and bona fide cops were beside them.

The playing was only in the beginning, however—and I guess Babe wasn't hit any harder than Tris by the criminology bug. Where Tris played with the thing and eventually dropped it as a

GIRL, FINDING FRIEND IS WED, TRIES TO DIE

Back Bay Blonde Beauty Battles Efforts of Doctors to Save Her Life

When love laughed at Dorothy Hubert, beautiful blonde model of Queensberry st., Back Bay, she swallowed poison, her closest friend declared today as doctors fought in City Hospital to save her life.

The model, with a bottle of poisonous tablets clutched in one hand, walked into City Hospital last night and told attendants she wished to die and had swallowed some of the poison.

After a struggle an antidote was administered to her, but today her name was still on the danger list.

Her act, according to the close friend, Miss Eileen Murphy of Massachusetts ave., Back Bay, came after a night and day of grieving over the failure of her sweetheart to keep an appointment Saturday night—one in a series of such failures.

BLUE, WOULDN'T DANCE

It was then learned that the man with whom she had been keeping company and whom she believed single was really married and the father of children.

"She was depressed all Saturday night when my boy friend and I made her go out with us," said Miss Morley, "and all day yesterday she refused to cheer up and forget her friend.

"We both had appointments Saturday night. My friend showed up, but Dorothy's did not, although we waited for more than two hours. Dorothy went back to her apartment and was very blue, but finally we persuaded her to go out to a restaurant with us.

"She would not dance, however, and she was still depressed when we went back home and left her at her place. If I had known she was as downhearted as she was, I would not have left her alone."

VISITED AT HOSPITAL

Miss Hubert, one of Boston's most sought after models, has posed for the city's leading artists and has a reputation of being able to hold a pose longer than other girls in the profession.

Mrs. Ida Glen, manager of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts School, said she had known Miss Hubert since November, when she went to work in classes about five years ago, but knows little about her private life.

At City Hospital, Miss Hubert at first refused to reveal her identity, but later admitted she was the Back Bay model. She attempted to prevent doctors from administering the antidote, and they were compelled to force the medicine down her throat.

Then the girl gave attendants a Back Bay number which, when called, resulted in a man and his wife visiting the girl at the hospital. They left no names.

Auto Killing Laid to Norwood Man

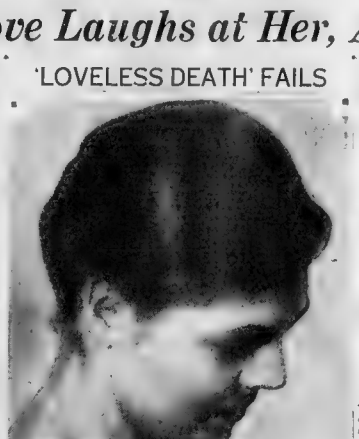
Responsibility for the death of Harold G. Keeley, struck by an auto while on the highway, was placed upon Leon F. Sansome of Norwood, in an interlocutory decree filed today in Superior Court by Judge Fullerton of Dedham district court.

Sansome, who took the victim to Norwood hospital, told police he had found him under the High st. bridge in Norwood. Discrepancies in stories of Sansome and John J. Hayes, a passenger in Sansome's car, led to police investigation which, it is alleged, disclosed suspicious marks on Sansome's car.

Hearing on Golf Course

Before the ways and means committee at the State House Thursday morning a hearing is to be held on the proposed state-owned golf course, to be constructed and operated by the Metropolitan District commission in or adjoining the Middlesex Fells reservation.

'LOVELESS DEATH' FAILS



Because "death was preferable to life without love" and "this eternal posing," Dorothy Hubert, 26, a beautiful blonde model at the School of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, swallowed poison and walked into City Hospital to die. Doctors, however, applied quick restoratives and her life was saved.

AUTOISTS FACE MELROSE FIRE SEARCH IN LYNN DRIVES OUT 8

Under orders issued by Mayor J. Fred Manning, Lynn police will take drastic steps beginning tonight to curb the epidemic of unsolved holdups.

Every automobile entering or leaving the city late at night will be stopped and searched for suspicious characters and weapons, and all persons having guns without permits, will be arrested.

All available police reserves will be on duty nightly augmenting the regular force, and all available police cars will tour the city. The mayor issued these instructions to Chief James H. Broad.

Ching Lee proprietor of a laundry on the ground floor, his wife and six children fled to the streets when San Lee, the oldest girl, was roused by smoke and found the building in flames. They were the only occupants of the block. A second alarm was sounded, calling apparatus from Wakefield.

SOCIETY GIRL FAILS TO MOVE LYNN JUDGE

A six-foot stalwart of Yale's varsity football team protested embarrassedly, and Judge Ralph W. Reeve smiled and shook his head today when one of Boston's most popular society girls pleaded in Lynn court to be arraigned as a speeder in place of the football man.

The girl, Miss Gladys Winifred Thorndike, of 175 Marlboro st., daughter of Harry Hill Thorndike retired engineer, explained that as the only holder of a driving license when the couple was halted yesterday in Lynn, she should be the one arraigned.

HARE PAYS FINE

T. Truxton Hare, Jr., of Radnor Pa., 225-pound Yale guard and son of the former University of Pennsylvania All-American guard in the nineties, interrupted his companion several times and finally was rewarded by being fined.

"Mr. Hare," the society girl told Judge Reeve, "has licenses to drive in Connecticut and Pennsylvania, but he brought neither with him to Boston, while I have one. I told the officer that I wished to take Mr. Hare's license. I did my license. He told me, however, that that was not legal.

"The officer was correct, Miss Thorndike," said Judge Reeve, "as the defendant here was actually at the wheel when stopped by the officer."

Hare, who was smiling in embarrassment, appeared relieved and pleaded guilty to the charge of driving Miss Thorndike's car at 54 miles an hour in Western ave., Lynn.

JUDGE RECALLS HARE, SR.

He was fined $15 and after he had paid it, Judge Reeve called him to the bench and said:

"I used to go to school with your father, Mr. Hare, and he treated me enough on the gridiron to make the All-American several years."

Ramon Ventures to Kiss Frightened, But Not Displeased, Jenny

What Has Happened So Far

John G. Rarick has made millions as a chain store operator. His wife, Jenny, shortly after their marriage, lent him $2500, all she had when he was near failure, and out of this money he built riches. But Jenny resents his far-from-imposing appearance and no longer feels real love for him. The thought is always in her mind that without her $2500 Rarick would have achieved nothing. Her goading results in Rarick's agreeing to go East and to buy a magnificent home, but, secretly, he finds himself hating her. This is accentuated by his own temperamental inability to get close to Jennifer and Avery, his children. Rarick installs an odd genius, Dr. Felix Gerkes, in his house. Jenny objects and a bitter scene follows in which Rarick delivers the ultimatum that Gerkes remains. He sends for Jennifer and compels her to cancel a dinner engagement to dine with Gerkes. Jennifer finds him interesting. Jenny begins to be intrigued with Ramon, a youthful gigolo.

Now Go On with the Story

By Fannie Hurst

Whose Novels Have Given Her a Reputation as One of the Foremost of Modern Writers.

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

NO IT had been many a day since close, fervent things had been said to Jenny.

Ramon, half her age, had interpreted her with a melancholy kind of wisdom.

"Why do you try to deceive me as you do the others, with your icy manner?" he said to her, with the slight accent that lifted his lips in a flare off his square white teeth.

"My dear boy," she said, starting to be brittle and annihilating in the cocksure way she had, "you are now in the act of telling me how misunderstood I am."

To her surprise, he was neither annihilated nor subdued. He caught both her hands in one vance of hands, half-buried under wrist-ruffs, in the grip of his own.

"You must not talk like that to me. You do not mean what you say. You are the most interesting woman that I know. One cannot bear to be in the company of the insipid young girls once he has known you. Do not pretend, Mrs. Rarick, that you need to be told that you are fascinating. Sometimes I think you are as Dante would have seen it he had been beautiful and a woman. Sometimes I think you are more like Beatrice. Then I think you are like the best of both of them."

A Faint Rebuke

"Why, you foolish boy!" she said the words, from lack of conviction, slow and stiff on her lips. American men simply did not look at one like that. They had not the eyes . . .

"I want to see more of you, Mrs. Rarick. I want to know you. Am I impertinent—"

He was . . .

"—or just one more admirer. After all, I cannot be what you call in America, such a 'total loss,' Mrs. Rarick, or I would not recognize so quickly a brilliant and worth-while woman when I see one. It is easy to dance with your beautiful girls over here—but they are not so nimble with their brains as with their feet and tongues. Am I impertinent?"

He was. Yet how amusing of him! Here was no mere patent-leather-haired gigolo, with a gift for wearing evening clothes and making middle-aged women horrible. Impudent of him to have insinuated his fingers up under the fur cuff of, her long, tight sleeve—in flames—she did not withdraw them—

There was a letter between Jenny's bodice and her flesh, as she maneuvered before the mirror. It was a line from Ramon, confirming what had been the hurried arrangement for this afternoon's cocktail.

"Lest you forget what is unforgettably important to me. This afternoon at five, where the orchids dare not bloom for fear of comparison.

"RAMON"

The "d" off the "Ramon" had somehow excited her more than the note itself. She was aware, as she sat up that morning in bed and put the square, white envelope back on her breakfast tray, that her legs, which were stretched between the sheets, were trembling and would have doubled under her had she attempted to stand.

A wave of self-pity, not unmixed with anger, drenched Jenny as she sat and dipped strawberries-in-November into a small brown bowl of sour cream. What a starveling she must be, if just the ordinary homage and admiration from a boy such as Ramon could bring about all this turmoil within her.

Why, in the last few years, she and Rarick had left off even pecking each other good-night.

It was well over 20 years since the days when he had pieced kisses against her lips when he came home evenings, or stretched himself out after dinner on a couch, holding her hand while she sat beside him and read aloud. Twenty years, or was it ever?

Passing Her By

Life was passing her by. And for what? For nothing more than a dumb-animal response to the instinct to abide by her sense of wifely duty. For what? For Rarick, to whom even her fidelity might be a matter of indifference? Thank God, thank God, it was still left in her to feel that cut of thrill at the left-off "d."

Ramon was in the conservatory, poking about among goldfish which darted about a beautiful wall-fountain of Pulhamite stone that Rarick had brought over with its kitchen still clinging to it, from a rock-garden he had admired in Taormina.

He kissed her hand, lifting back some lace first, and then regarded her in long silence, a slight film of moisture across his eyes making them deeper.

The quick picture of half a dozen men who knew, including Rarick, flashed across her mind's eye. How clumsily they would have paid this same simple tribute. Mark House, an American who had been fabulously rich all his life and lived much abroad, always employed this continental fawning. But unsmilingly, creaking where his shirt bent, and leaving the disagreeable feeling of smear across his knuckles.

A Count Luckow, whom Jenny suspected of casting amorous eyes at Jennifer, who had only ridicule for him, had this habit gracefully. Rarick, somehow, would not visualize.

She could imagine that, to a young man like Ramon whose masculinity was not mere maleness, there must be something chapped and a little funny about the unkissed hands of American women.

Precious little Jenny had demanded or received. A stab of self-pity, the immemorial self-pity of a woman being denied.

I Jenny. Rarick as a husband and lover! It was inconceivable that he could be missing in his

GRUVER HITS SCHOOL SYSTEM AS YOUTHFUL CRIME-BREEDER

EFFICIENT PLAN CAN CUT EVIL 90 PER CENT

Superintendent of Schools in Address Before Jecomen Club at Temple Bethel

The present school system is to blame for a great part of the crimes prevalent among youths today, Supt. of Schools Harvey S. Gruver said in an address yesterday before the Jecomen Club at Temple Beth El.

"At least 90 per cent of those who here are criminals and burglars in society would be eliminated by a more efficient public educations system," he said.

"Although the home is in part to blame, the public schools must assume responsibility for a great portion of the crimes by youth, which are so prevalent today.

"We are part of the state and until it co-operates to help the school and home, we will continue in this deplorable condition of a crime wave by youth in its teens.

"We are an amateurish people with respect to law-making. We have too many laws. The present generation of students, if trained properly, would not need so many laws to govern them.

"For that purpose we need an advanced school system. Not until the public is willing to pay for it, will our ideal of good citizenship be realized."

RAID VICTIMS ARE FINED $20

"I'm Micky the Wise Guy's friend, and if you fellows arrest me I'll have you put on the spot."

So Miss Mae Conners is alleged to have threatened officers who arrested her in a raid at the Hotel Clarendon, in Tremont st., last night, after she had been chased through a window and up a fire escape to the roof by members of the raiding party.

The only "Micky the Wise Guy" known to Boston police is Michael Rosso, questioned recently in the murder of Frankie Marlow, New York gangster. He was tried and acquitted in 1927 of the murder in South Boston of John J. Sullivan.

The Connors girl and nine other men and women seized in the Clarendon and eight others caught in raids on Tremont st. and Wheeler st. were found guilty on serious charges in municipal court today. The men paid fines of $20 each and the cases of the women were postponed until Wednesday.

FIGHTS RETURN TO ERIN

William J. Clifford of Arlington, former collector of taxes in the Irish Free State, who faces extradition on the charges that he stole tax money before leaving for this country. At a hearing today before U. S. Commissioner Jenney it was indicated Clifford may be ordered returned to Ireland. Clifford, on left, is shown with his counsel, George A. Douglass.

CLIFFORD FACES THREW SPINACH EXTRADITION BUT NOT AT HIM

Extradition of William J. Clifford of Arlington, former collector of taxes in the Irish Free State, may be ordered by U. S. Commissioner Jenney, it was indicated today in Federal court at the close of arguments by counsel.

Clifford's extradition has been requested by the Irish Free State on the allegation that he stole between $600 and $800 in tax money before leaving there for the United States.

It is Clifford's contention that he banked the tax money each week, after his accounts had been certified by proper authorities.

Following arguments between counsel over whether the treaty between Great Britain and the United States in 1842 covers the Clifford case, Commissioner Jenney said to George A. Douglass, counsel for Clifford:

"Unless there is some legal obstacle, I am inclined to order his extradition.

"On the question of jurisdiction, I would suggest that you, Mr. Douglass, take that matter to the district court. I want to give the defendant every benefit that is possible, and I will give you until May 11 to file a brief on this matter to which you refer and I will give a ruling on this brief May 18."

Atty. Douglass maintained that, in the absence of a treaty between the United States and the Irish Free State, Clifford could not be extradited, while Joseph P. O'Connell, counsel for the Free State, asserts that the Great Britain treaty covered the case.

Denial that she had ever thrown a plate of spinach at her husband was made in Middlesex Probate Court today by Mrs. Bertha R. Gessman of Newton, sued for divorce on grounds of cruelty by Atty Nyman Gessman of Revere.

When Mrs. Gessman left the stand Judge Legzat dismissed the case with the remark that it seemed to be based on trivial things.

Mrs. Gessman testified that when her spouse objected to the dish being served she hurled it, not at him, but at the garbage pail.

Also, she said, the name of a boy friend was not mentioned by her when she applied lipstick before going out one evening.

"My husband and I were going to visit our landlord," she said, "I used a lipstick and he objected. He told me to rub it off and then slapped me. He started to wipe it off my lips and then he slapped me again."

At a previous session Judge Legzat decreed no man has a rightful objection to the use of lipstick by his wife.

Mrs. Gessman related a meeting with her husband at his lawyers office, during which Gessman offered to live with her if she gave him $10,000.

"I told him I didn't have that much money," she said. Then he said he'd come back for $5000. I said I didn't have even $5000. And he said if I didn't have the money there was no use talking about it and he went out."

100 BOY SCOUTS HUNT MISSING CONTRACTOR

Youths Comb Dense Saugus Woods for John Skahan, Gone Since Friday

About 100 Boy Scouts under the leadership of town and state police today scoured the North Saugus woods for John Skahan, 55, contractor, who disappeared from his home last Friday.

Fearing foul play, police sought the assistance of the Boy Scouts and about 100 responded.

They were equipped with food and necessary implements and, under the direction of police, began combing the five or six square miles of dense woods in North Saugus.

Skahan was last seen Friday noon by several officials of the health department. The missing man is married and holds the contract for the town's garbage removal.

WIFE OF 'EXILE' IS A CITIZEN

Three years ago their hopes crashed when the husband was deported, but today Mrs. Esther Weiss, 28-year-old mother, living in Garden st., West End, won her citizenship papers and began a fight to bring her husband back to Boston.

Arnold Weiss was sent back to Czecho-Slovakia because of illness, after he had been three years in this country, and is now living there with relatives. The two children, Max, 9, and Bella, 6, remained here.

800 DENTISTS IN CONVENTION

The correct method of brushing one's teeth was illustrated by Dr. J. William Grant, secretary of the Massachusetts Dental Examiners, at the 87th annual meeting of the Massachusetts Dental Society at the Hotel Statler today.

"Contrary to an almost universal belief," said Dr. Grant, "the proper motion of a tooth brush should be circular and not up and down. In this way the inner recesses of the molar separations are reached and matter that ordinarily might cause psorrhea is removed. Dentists all over the country are advocating this method."

The convention, which has drawn more than 800 dentists from every State, will last four days, and as in former years the "teaching clinics" will constitute an important part of the program.

The morning session was devoted to a councillors' meeting for the transaction of business.

Lectures, broadcast over the Yankee Network of the Shepard Stores, were delivered by Dr. Thomas K. Ross, past president of the society; Dr. Walter J. Bryans, vice-president, and Dr. Edwin N. Kent of Boston.

Tonight Dr. James A. Brady of Philadelphia is to lecture on "Whither Are We Drifting?" with a discussion by Dr. Kent.

More Employes for Welfare Dept. Urged

The Boston Council of Social Agencies, following an investigation of activities of the Boston public welfare department, recommends the department be given more stenographic and clerical help. The report was made to Mayor Curley today, who turned it over to the city council.

The social agencies council finds that while there doubtless "have been some mistakes in the welfare department, due to the large number of requests for aid during the past few months, the managers have worked while hearing to handle the situation."

Garrett has completed five months in Charles St. jail awaiting decision of his case. District Attorney William J. Foley will move to have the third jury locked up throughout the trial.

PREVENTION DAY IS OBSERVED IN SCHOOLS

Dr. Solomon Rubin Believes Disease Will Join List of Rare Maladies

Diphtheria Prevention Day was observed in Boston public schools today, marking the start of a three weeks' campaign during which some 11,000 children of the kindergarten and first grade will be inoculated.

Some 55 school physicians and 60 nurses are carrying on the work under the direction of Dr. Solomon H. Rubin, acting director of school hygiene. Children having the written consent of their parents receive three injections one week apart of toxin-anti-toxin, followed in six months by the Schick test to determine whether or not immunity has resulted.

Dr. Rubin, who in 1921 was the first to administer Schick tests in Boston public schools, believes diphtheria can be made a rare disease by means of the injections, which are described as harmless.

"Figures which have come from authoritative sources are sufficiently convincing to justify the prediction that if continued with the same zeal and energy which have in the past characterized the work of diphtheria prevention throughout the country, public agencies and physicians will ultimately banish diphtheria from the list of prevalent diseases and place it among those that are now considered rare and uncommon," said Dr. Rubin.

About 55 per cent of children in kindergarten and first grades will be inoculated this year, others having received injections in other school years, from city health units, hospitals or private physicians.

In circulars sent to all parents, Jeremiah E. Burke, superintendent of public schools, stated:

"No child need have diphtheria. It can be prevented. Toxin-antitoxin is harmless and can be safely used to protect your child against this serious disease."

MAY-DECEMBER WEDDING TODAY

The wedding this afternoon of Dr. Osburne C. B. Nason, 72, wealthy Cambridge physician, and Miss Blanche Urban, 22, will culminate a May-December romance that had its beginning a few months ago when Miss Urban came to the physician as a patient.

The couple will be married in the rectory of St. Patrick's Church in York st., Cambridge.

Miss Urban, a trained nurse, is a graduate of Lawrence high school. According to Dr. Nason, who is prominent in Cambridge medical circles, the romance was one of love at first sight. Dr. Nason's first wife, Medora Barber Nason, died in 1923.

Kin of Dead Man Sought in Salem

Relatives of the late Patrick J. McGowan of Hermosa, South Dakota, who died several weeks ago are being sought in Salem and Peabody at the request of Rev. Fr. Ehrenbold, pastor of the parish in which McGowan lived.

A letter from Father Ehrenbold received at the Immaculate Conception Church in Salem stated that McGowan made his home at Salem years ago and is believed to have brothers and sisters residing in Salem or Peabody.

Man Held as Drunk Walks to Freedom

Left alone in the Waltham district courtroom today, Otto Ramsburg, 38, of Stamford st., West End, reached over and unlatched the gate of the prisoners' dock and walked from the building, according to the police. Several hours later he was still missing. He was arrested for drunkenness, found to be on parole from the state farm, and was held to await the arrival of officers from the farm.

Unique System Used to Teach Youngsters Secrets of Music

The bottle hymn of the Republic. Patriotic airs take on a new delight to little pupils of a Mount Vernon, N. Y., school. Here is Paul Grimberg learning to play by ear in one of the unique music classes. The bottles contain varying amounts of water which cause them to produce a complete range of tones when struck by the small mallets.

Make a note of this! Little Miria Blechman and Norman Murch, pupils in a Mount Vernon school, compose a melody with the aid of movable notes hung from wires representing the conventional staff. This effective method of training the children in musical appreciation and composition was introduced by Dr. W. H. Holmes and Miss Minnie S. Graham.

BUSINESS USERS OF THE TELEPHONE

PAINT

The Hampden Paint and Chemical Company of Springfield does a business of about $500,000 per year from its factory stock. Its chief product, "Snowy White," is popular with jobbers and large industrial users who want immediate service on orders ranging from a barrel to a car-load. Practically all this business is handled by telephone.

THE Hampden Company carries no stock except at its factory. Yet, by effective use of telephone service, it is able to make over-night deliveries to New York and to all parts of New England. Hence, its jobbers require no large inventories.

Customers are invited to reverse the toll charges on rush orders to the factory. Orders received up to 4 P. M. are sent out by truck and delivered the following morning. A single factory stock serves the entire territory.

* * * * * *

IT is just this sort of thing—the adaption of the telephone to varied business needs—that makes us proud of the service we are able to render. The market for our service is broadened when we help you to more effective buying, selling, or distribution. Hence, we study this market, anticipate its needs wherever possible, and adapt our facilities to its requirements for speedy, effective, economical communication.

Can we help you with your special problem? It's good business for us to do so, if we can good business for you, if we do. It will cost you nothing to let us analyze your problem and suggest a solution. Just call "Business Office" and ask that a special representative be sent.

MAKE-BELIEVE

By FAITH BALDWIN

Lady Diana the Real Delight

By FAITH BALDWIN

"I WON'T betray your falsal secret. What was his name?" asked Larry with little interest.

"Lorimer. I was crazy about him," she said, half dreamily. "But he was killed."

Larry stared at her. He wanted to shout to grasp her hands, to call her by name. Now he knew the resemblance which had worried him. She was a thin Mary Lou small, red-haired, blue-eyed the same shaped face, the features not unlike. A little, like a carbon copy, an older sister who had seen a great deal of life.

But she mustn't know—until he had seen Mary Lou and told her, until they decided what to do. He must see Margaret Lorimer, too. His thoughts raced. He was still staring, flushed with excitement. And she asked him, amused:

"What's the matter? Have you an earth are you staring like that?"

Obediently he dropped his eyes to her hands. His ease was a little, "Nothing, I—I almost forget it, at times," she said, a little bitterly. "It doesn't suit me very well now more—for it is—delight. Delight Harford," she said.

Larry stirred at her. After a minute.

"Isn't it" So appropriate, too," she responded, with a definite acidity. Her face dropped into lines of relaxation. All that her life had made of her was written there, all that her life had brought her. One could know in the fine cobweb marks about eyes and nose and mouth the years of constant circumstances, too good living; semi-starvation; hope, despair, and a feverish gayety. She'd not had an easy time, this Delight Harford, and the gifts with which she had been liberally endowed by her birth, gifts of beauty, vitality, laughter and strength, which she squandered for something less than the usual portage.

Yet she had, still, a partly disinterested, a dimmed but discernible humanity, fine contours, lovely modeling, a skin which had withstood much of the wear and tear as far as natural coloring and texture was concerned. She made Larry a little sick somehow, so like, and so unlike, Mary Lou she now seemed to him.

He was of course not astonished at what she told him. He had known the truth from the time she mentioned, casually enough Lorimer's name. He was past astonishment. All that he could think of was that he had found her for whom, for so long, the Lorimers had been seeking. What this would mean to Lorimer, to his mother, to Mary Lou herself, Larry could not think, dared not think. The story of the prodigal son flashed through his bewildered mind . . . something about . . . "It is meet to make merry and be glad . . ."

But was it?

He looked about the room. Hotel, saw a dramatic critic he knew slightly, and the tenor of a light opera whom he had had a long run. He pointed them out to—what should he call her?—his companion, and spoke easily, wittily of this characteristic or the other of some one and her laughing at his simple idioms, forgetting, perhaps, her confidence.

Later, he took her back to the apartment thanked her for "an elegant evening and promised to see her soon again. Then he went home to his lodging house room and took his red head in his hands and tried to think himself—and all of them—out of this situation in a situation which appeared to contain within itself all the devastating powers of dynamite.

His first impulse was to telephone Mrs. Lorimer. But on second thought he decided that he would tell Mary Lou first of it. She was a sane little person was Mary Lou, level-headed and clear-eyed. She would know what to do, whether to tell Lorimer at once or whether, which was the wisest course, to conclude to investigate "Diana's" story a little more fully before Lorimer was told.

He wrote to Mary Lou that night. And he said, something important to tell her, and would be out on the following afternoon. He had promised Jenny to come for the week-end but would stop at Westwood first. Could she by any happy chance, get rid of Lorrimer for a few minutes? He must see her alone, Larry wrote, in his scrawling hand, and, sealing the envelope, went out to the mail box with it, and listened to its tiny thud as it dropped in.

Fitting a shampoo and wave into one's lunch-on hour wouldn't be so bad if it were not for the frightful waste of time spent under the drier which is necessary when a wet wave is had. And it is to meet the need of good results in less time that some of the more progressive hair experts have worked out the following method of caring for the hair.

One needs a permanent wave to begin with, for most of us have them anyway, so that isn't so great a departure from precedent. Instead of the usual, full-time permanent, however, a light permanent is given by cutting the steaming down three minutes.

This light steaming fulfills all of the action of any permanent, except that it doesn't set the wave so plainly in the hair. Of course, a definite, waving cuttine results, and it will last as long as the full-time permanent. But it isn't quite as deep and definite.

With this type of wave the usual shampoo is given, the hair dried quickly under the drier and then a light marcel is given We all know how much quicker the hair dries when it can be moved about and has no waving fluid on it. Five minutes will dry any hair except that which is unusually thick and long. So from 30 to 40 minutes is cut off the drying time allowed when a finger wave is set.

Unlike a marcel set in straight hair, the wave does not come out when the hair is damp.

Of course it takes a little longer to give a marcel than it does to set a finger wave, but the usual marcel wave time is cut down. I should say that at least half an hour is saved by this method, possibly a little more.

And, although half an hour doesn't seem long to some folks, it's the difference between according luncheon or one's coiffure.

What's in Fashion Today

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, May 4—Once the joke was all about the golf widow, alone in her ruffles and lace. Now there are golf widowers, too. (Some of 'em widowers by choice, because they don't like to be beaten by their wives.)

The lady who used to stay home in ruffles and lace now whacks out a good 190 yards in a comfortable, practical tweed, or jersey or any other of the fashionable golf costumes And right now she's getting golf-ers-tired again.

Of course clothes don't really make the golfer. But the right clothes certainly do help the golf morale. Knowledge that she's wearing the wrong clothes must surely presents one of the mental hazards that are fine alibi but good for nothing on the score card.

Comfort and Simplicity

Right golf clothes are first of all comfortable clothes. And they're sturdy clothes And they're neat clothes. And they're simple clothes. If they're all these things, they're fashionable . . . and they're fashionable feminine golfers are wearing.

Watch Gloria Collett. You won't see her wearing dresses that bind in the shoulders. Nor blowing scarfs, nor rattling bracelets, nor ruffled skirts.

Watch any serious golfers. You'll see them wearing the good old knitted things that have lots of give. Lots of "take," too. Because they'll take all sorts of pulling and straining without damage.

And tweeds. How well these golfers know the smartness and comfort of a cosy-fitting tweed suit! They're warm, but not too warm. Can stand rain—as often happens in the Spring—and are a good practical outfit for general informal wear as well as for active golf.

But there are still newer fashions than all these that Spring golfers have taken up.

Angora Dresses

Angora and knitted silk angora are one of them. This soft, downy-feeling material is light as a feather, but as warm as you need this time of year. They're wearing it in dresses and in costumes of sweater and skirt.

The cotton meshes are another newer fashion. On two-piece dresses of the shirtwaist type, they're one of the smartest things you've seen. Some of the meshes are so tiny as to be almost invisible Others are maybe a sixteenth of an inch square. One of equally as fashionable as the other.

For courses where the wind sweeps, chamois jackets are adequate protectors. They come in pastel shades and white and can be washed with soap and water, just like your chamois gloves.

And there are cotton suedes that simulate these chamois jackets both in looks of material and in cut.

Fashion Notes

Dotted Swiss in colors makes charming shades.

There are going to be some little smaller capes worn this summer instead of evening wraps. Satin, taffeta, lace, chiffon—they're all fashionable.

CORRECT GOLF CLOTHES

LOVE LIVES ON

Today's True Story

RED HOOK is bounded by the splash of light cut through the night by Hamilton avenue, by the still oilness of the Gowanus ship canal, and the surging whitecaps of Buttermilk Channel as it runs like a mill race out to meet the incoming tide from the upper harbor. Third avenue cuts off the other boundary that keeps Red Hook from being like the rest of the world.

"Hook" O'Connor, christened Joseph by his mother, bore his cognomen to differentiate him from "Navy Yard" O'Connor, whose domain lay on up the East River, near Wallabout, where the drydock begins and ends at the Sand street.

After the war he was still called "Hook" but it was because of a vicious left an army instructor had taught him to hook over breaking out of the clinches, and it had served Connor well in the regimental bouts. Discipline, and the training of the army might have made a man of "Hook" O'Connor. It remained for Mary to do that.

When he went away Mary was just 17, but she'd promised to be waiting for him when he came back from the war. It was only when he found out she'd married the snappy young lieutenant from the front that she wrote about in her letters, that "Hook" O'Connor turned the other way.

"Hook" didn't get back with his division in the first group to come back from France When he did, and learned about Mary, his first act was to get out of uniform. He took the medals that came from stalking a machine gun nest at Chateau-Thierry, and the others that came from bringing two comrades back from the rain or fire along the Marne. He'd intended to give them to Mary, to save as a present for John Joseph, Jr., when he came into being, and was old enough to understand. Instead, he tossed them with an oath far out into the dark waters of Gowanus.

Just once, in the years that followed, he thought he saw Mary in the subway. A young woman tides swept in between them but he could get close enough to be sure. A boy, not a boy, of perhaps three or four, was tugging at her hand.

Thick Fog

The fog was thick off Amherse Listening over the headset strapped close to his ears "Hook" O'Connor heard the sharp, staccato dots and dashes, three dots, three dashes, three dots, repeated over and over—the SOS that carries the direst tidings of the sea. He grinned as he saw ships of the Coast Guard pulling away from their regular patrol stations, heard out to sea the grey ooze of the boat slid in between doors that opened under the floats of a high pier—head.

"All clear," some one down below called up. He repeated the word to those on the pier Then it happened.

A blinding glare from a battery of searchlights snapped on, and all within the glare were momentarily pitiless outline.

"Hands up — and stand still," shouted a voice and the men on "Hook" O'Connor's boat, the men on the truck, found themselves looking into machine guns set to cover all inside the perfect trap.

The day of arraignment. "Hook" O'Connor heard the testimony of a trim Coast Guard lieutenant how a false S O S from a rum-running ship had been recognized as such, how the cutters had gone out to sea, how every outlet for the booze that was known to be off shore had been covered by coast guardsmen of a landing party.

All through the hours that followed black thoughts surged through "Hook" O'Connor's brain. Then in time the formalities were complied with. Bail was set. He stepped out into the open—and a messenger handed him a tiny package He opened it—and gazed on the Chateau-Thierry medal.

"A lady gave it to me," the messenger chattered, when O'Connor demanded to know who had sent the bit of metal. And, in answer to a grip on his shoulder that made him wince, he did pointed out a figure disappearing in the crowd He set out in pursuit. He caught her just at the kiosk of the subway.

"Mary," he called out, and the eyes she turned to him were brimming with tears she could not quite hold back.

On Death List

"You see the casualty lists told of J. J. O'Connor being killed at Chateau-Thierry. Then father died and I was left alone. The lieutenant I'd told you about kept pleading with me to marry him. He wanted some one, he said, to be a mother to his motherless boy. I was lonely, honey, dont you see. I was hungry for love, and all alone. I yielded."

"Then the boy isn't yours—and his?" gulped the man.

"No—just his," she answered. "And when I found out from the War Department that you were not dead after all, I had to come to you. Your medals had been sent to your father. They fell on a tug, and had been sent to him. He sent them on to me. And I divorced the lieutenant. When I knew that you were still near, through the pictures in the papers, I just had to come to you."

Both of them suddenly remembered that "Navy Yard" O'Connor's mother had christened him James Jerusalem, so Mary's mistake was easily understood. "Hook" O'Connor fished in his pocket, and brought out the long missing medal.

"This," he said, "we'll save for John Joseph, Jr."

To the driver of the cab he merely gave an order

"Marriage license bureau, City Hall."

Etiquette at Public Dance

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

"A" says that it is not proper to dance with a young man at a public dance unless you have an introduction. "B" says that girl may dance with the young man regardless of the introduction, when he asks for the pleasure of having the dance with her [illegible] it?

I entirely agree with "A."

Not a Foolish Question—But Difficult

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

If a young man has been in the habit of taking a girl out two or three times in a week and then suddenly stops for some unknown reason, should the girl ask the young man his reason for breaking off?

I hope you will not think this a foolish question. ANXIOUS.

I don't think that this is a foolish question but I do think that it is a difficult question, for usually there is a deep human reason for the asking of it. There isn't much to do about this sort of thing, really nothing to do, since the girl, if she asks for an explanation, puts herself in a position to be even more hurt. One of the sad but true things to learn about life, dear Anxious, is that men will do about as they please in a situation of this kind. And women must hold their heads as high as possible!

All Gifts Are for the Bride-to-Be

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When sending a gift to a bride-to-be, is it advisable to bring only or to both the bride and groom?

E. M.

The gift is addressed to the bride-to-be only . . . all wedding gifts belong to her. It is sent to her home.

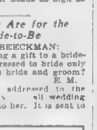
Use of Light Therapy Is Advised

By DR. COPELAND.

WITHIN recent years, light therapy has become very popular. The use of certain lamps under proper supervision is of great benefit.

However, the indiscreet use of health lamps by every conceivable ailment may do harm.

"Actino-therapy," which is the treatment by the use of the rays of a carbon lamp, certain ailments by rays of light, should be given only by a competent person who has received training in this subject. The violet rays are extremely beneficial, but also dangerous if handled carelessly.



Dr. Copeland

When the skin is exposed to the rays of a carbon lamp, certain complex changes take place. The most marked of these is shown in the blood. The constituents of the blood, namely the red and white cells, the platelets, the fluid part of the blood, the hemoglobin, or coloring matter, all undergo marked changes.

When exposed to the ultra-violet rays the red blood cells are slightly increased in number. After continuing treatment the coloring matter increases. It is believed, too, there may be slight increase in the number of white blood cells.

The blood platelets are tiny cellules found in the blood stream. For a long time the functions of these bodies were not known. It is now believed they have something to do with the resistance of the body to infection. In acute infectious diseases, as coryza, measles, influenza, the blood platelets are decreased in number.

Following exposure to the ultra-violet rays, the platelets are increased. It is interesting to note that in animals kept in the dark and away from sunlight, there is a marked decrease in the number of these platelets.

Please remember not to use any lamp without first consulting your physician. Skin irritations and other internal disorders may occur unless the method of therapy is used carefully.

Why Twist Meaning of Words?

By WINIFRED BLACK.

WORDS are queer things Sometimes they say what they mean and sometimes they say what they do not mean.

When someone repeats to you something that a friend or an enemy has said about you say that thing over to yourself.

Say it three or four different ways and it will have three or four different meanings Pick up the meaning you like the best—and let it go at that not to mention heartache.

I heard a man telling a woman what her lover said about her the other day.

"Your brother doesn't think such a lot of you," said the man to the woman, "he was telling me something about you the other day and he said Oh well, she's a woman, I guess we'll have to remember that."

And the way the man said those words made you hate the brother who was supposed to say them first.

Bitterness, jealousy, sex antagonism, contempt, (as you all unism, contempt, (as you all) all was full of them when the words were spoken.

But I happen to know the brother.

He isn't much to brag of, the brother. He has never made what you would call success in life. I one might call success in life. I one might call success in life. I one might

BIG EXCHANGE HOUSES COME TO BOSTON

By FRANK H. MELOON

Member houses of the New York Stock Exchange continue to add to their Boston branches. One such expansion took place Saturday, another today. There have been several in the past few weeks. As previously recorded here, this is primarily due to the fact that an increasing proportion of outside business" on the New York Stock Exchange is coming from New England. It is our understanding from reliable sources, that Boston today a firmly entrenched second since in the respect, but only Chicago.

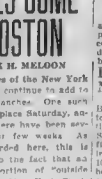
Just now the one from which the most cheering report are making, the Bonbright [illegible] all one of five industry, with all its ramifications of selling agencies, garages and filling stations, will have a helpful hand extended toward its growth when, as and if traffic regulations common to all state can be standardized. A movement toward the end is being led by the American Automobile Association [illegible] approves one of the most important safety moves ever undertaken.



Miller McClintock

Take the different "speed" laws, for example. Cities are fond of denouncing speed as the cause of accidents, without noting any difference between reasonable and unreasonable speed. Plainly, the man at the automobilist drives at the speed which seems to him proper or the highest and safest, says Dr. or Miller McClintock of the Albert Russel Erskine Bureau for Street Traffic Research at Harvard has something to say on this point.

Mr. McClintock states:

"Recently the Albert Russel Erskine Bureau of Harvard University conducted investigations in several states where speed limits, prima facie limits and no limits. Under comparable traffic conditions the average highway speeds were approximately the same in all states."

Election of Henry J. Gaisman as Gillette's new chairman, chronicled here last Friday, is interesting in an odd way, inasmuch as it makes another investor a big money on his ideas. It has been previously not.l that King Gillette, who invented the safety razor, was one of the few inventors to benefit in a large way by his genius. Mr. Gaisman is the inventor of the Autostrop.

Mr. Gillette is said to have thought up the safety razor idea while pressing an old fashioned flatiron. He wanted to invent something which would be of wide appeal and first worked on the idea of obtaining a heavin patent. If he had followed his original intention Mr. Gillette would doubtless have found his fortunes hard hit when "bobbed hair" came into vogue.

Dr Julius Klein of Cambridge, former Harvard instructor, now assistant Secretary of Commerce, will achieve an unusual distinction tonight. His radio talk over the Columbia Broadcasting System, delivered yesterday, will be repeated over several New England systems by Hugh Butler of Boston, New England manager of the U. S. Grigsby-Grunow's Sales Bring Profit

President R J Grigsby of the Grigsby-Grunow Company, said that, although unit radio sales during the first four months of the year were more than 50 per cent below the like period last year, the company reported a substantial profit during both February and March.

These profits, he said, although absorbed by inventory losses and non-recurring losses receivable from operations prior to 1 April, indicate reduction in expenses effected under reorganiz l management.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Assertion of bear ranks today by a number of big traders was reported, on the ground of "too much company." These traders have withdrawn from the market for the time being.

Death of Baker Is No Market Factor

Though the death of George F. Baker, veteran banker and a director in scores of important corporations, was widely regretted in Wall Street the passing of the great financier was without any disturbing effect on the stock market. For 10 years or more Mr. Baker has been quietly transferring his huge corporate holdings to his son and to investment institutions operated in line with his policies.

Inheritance Taxes in Government Bonds

It is believed that the inheritance taxes on the vast Baker estate will be paid in U. S. Government bonds, thus necessitating the liquidation of low it ars security holdings.

Copper Shares Off on Drop in Metal

Reduction of copper prices to as low as 9 cents a pound for small lots was reported in Wall Street today and the copper shares slumped off moderately.

Larger Profit for Tank Car Likely

General Amer can Tank Car soil unchanged through most of today's session. Corporation the had net profit of $1,204,000 in the first quarter, equal to $1.67 a share, against $1,-030,917, or $1.43 a share, in the same 1930 period. Lester N. Selig, president, said the present rate of operations should result in increase in earnings for the second quarter.

Electric Auto-Lite Slump Is Severe

Electric Auto-Lite has only lately been showing recession signs of rallying on improved buying Slumping to under 46, after being worth touted above 70 earlier this year, its decline has been se vere.

Wilsonian Policy Urged by Brokers

Policy of watchful waiting is being advocated by most interests. The fact that stocks have not been able to recover much of the ground thus far has caused increased caution and a more general tendency to remain out of the line side. Stop orders are again recommended to protect accounts of those inclined to maintain their hold gs for the time being

Southwestern Copper Merger Developing

Although conditions are fair in respect to the copper industry in western copper properties, it is not likely anything definite in the way of a combination will be completed before the end of the year. The new combine would have a production of something around 300,000 tons pound of copper annually, making it the third largest producer in the world.

Warren Foundry's First Quarter

Warren Foundry & Pipe is one of the few companies identified with the iron and steel group which is likely to earn its common and dend this year, according to interests close to the management. First quarter results were nearly sufficient to cover the 50-cent distribution, where in the same period last year a deficit was recorded April business has been good, and

PRICES HIGHER IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Stock prices moved to higher levels in dull trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Copper shares were the exceptions with Anaconda dipping a point to a new low and Copper Range easing fractionally to a new 1931 bottom Si Mazys dipped fractionally.

Second hand copper sold at 9 cents. This quotation equals the lowest price on record, which was first established in 1894.

Utilities were higher. American Telephone and General Electric each gained over a point. Edison Electric Illuminating and Reece Buttonhole Machinery each added ¾. Krueger & Toll and United Shoe were down.

Currently American Zinc is strengthening its condition, by virtue of an upward revision in earnings from a deficit of the fourth quarter of 1930. First quarter balance after all charges was approximately $90,000, equal to over $1 per share on the preferred, and April results reported this week are better.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

State Street, on days when selling predominated and prices faded away, heard much talk of liquidation by large holders. The reasons following this selling did not indicate any such condition in the opinion of many brokers. Selling did not carry over and they think the sharp, driving tactics of a well organized bear clique entirely responsible.

* * *

There can be no doubt but the continued poor behavior of prices is a puzzling circumstance, not only on the investor but on the ordinary business man. If this is seen purely as the efforts of the bear clique to depress the market, it is even more puzzling that selling should be definitely curbed.

There is much speculation regarding the chance of a renewal of merger negotiations between Bethlehem and Youngstown now that the Erskine interests have withdrawn from Continental Shares. Directors of Youngstown do not meet until the appeal from the injunction against a merger is heard by the courts.

* * *

Although study of the Steel Corporation's position does not coincide with the dividend during depressions, unless aggravated by unusual considerations, talks is heard of a cut at the July meeting. Even if a lower rate is in prospect, brokers think the shares are being well bought on intrinsic value.

* * *

Veterans in the financial district are warning the less experienced members of the trading fraternity to be skeptical of drives against the leaders. They point out that it is an old trick of the bears to drive Can and Steel in order to facilitate covering in other stocks in the list.

HARVARD VIEW CHEERFUL

A cheerful view is offered today in the Harvard Economic Society's current bulletin. This states:

"Though money remains extremely easy and liquidation in banking has gone far, commodity prices continue to decline and stock prices have undergone a severe slump Concerning the first, it is to be noted that upturn in commodity prices usually comes after recovery of business volume begins.

"The slump in stock prices is to be regarded in the light of movements in such prices during previous periods near the end of business depression. The historical record shows considerable diversity in such movements. It suggests, however, that at this stage in the business cycle the decline which has taken place in stocks will not necessarily prolong the decline in business volumes or postpone the date of the upturn."

STOCKS HIGHER, WITH TRADING VERY DULL

New York, May 4—Stocks in Wall st. today moved quietly higher in dull trading and made their best prices in the final hour, closing firm.

AUBURN UP $15

Shares rising 2 to 3 net included Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Eastman, American Telephone New York Central and Union Pacific.

U. S. Steel, American Can, Atchison, General Motors, General Electric and Chrysler were up a point or more, while Auburn soared over 17. Sales totaled less than 1,500,000 shares.

The better feeling engendered by the closing-hour upturn of Thursday appeared to be spreading once more, after the setback it received when the market broke again late Friday, and closed the past week with scarcely any fluctuations.

Bears did some experimental selling of U. S. Steel and American Can for a time in the morning, but got nowhere with it.

BAKER DEATH EFFECT

The death over the weekend of George F. Baker was not unsettling, to the financial markets, though he wielded a power commparable to that of the late J. Pierpont Morgan. Wall Street was convinced that a banker of Mr. Baker's acumen must have left his estate in such condition that unsettling liquidation would be unnecessary to settlement.

This belief was more or less unofficially confirmed in informed quarters. As a matter of fact, the stock markets has recovered from its habit of generations ago of getting nervous on news of deaths of great financiers. It was recalled that, although the news of the death of the elder Morgan in 1913 was received rather excitedly, the market was not appreciably influenced.

Heaviness of the copper shares reflected news of considerable demoralization of the market for red metal and the annual report of Anaconda, after showing a deficit of about $22,000,000 after payment of common dividends and the setting up of reserves against the drop in prices of inventories.

Copper metal has finally dropped below the 38-year low price of 9¼ cents established last autumn. Custom smelters are asking only 9¼ cents in some cases, and some metal has sold at 9 cents, or just half the price from which it started downward little more than a year ago, and below the cost of production for many producers.

Despite the still ugly trading outlook for many industries, however, Wall Street was able to view the situation more calmly than for several years.

The sharp setback late Friday, after the apparent selling climax of Wednesday and Thursday, had followed with suddenly to cause misgivings, but in important banking circles it is stated quite emphatically that troublesome matters have been generally smoothed out.

SHOE OUTPUT IS INCREASING

Syracuse, N. Y., May 4—Shoe manufacturing plants are running 70 per cent to 100 per cent of their capacities in this district.

In Endicott, N. Y., Endicott-Johnson Co. reports a 20 per cent increase in orders this year as compared with 1930. Production is reported at about 80 per cent of normal.

A. E. Nettleton Co. is at 70 per cent, with orders coming in at about the same rate as at this period last year, according to President Henry W. Cook.

"We are very much encouraged and believe business will improve from now on," he said.

Gray Bros., Inc., is operating five days a week, which is an improvement as compared with three months ago.

The Comadago Hide & Leather Co., manufacturers of shoe accessories, report a capacity business ever since the first of the year. The plant is running full time and orders coming in indicate there will be no letup in the near future.

Baker Bank Stock Rises $115 a Share

First National Bank of New York stock is bid $3490, an advance of $115 from the opening, when it was quoted $3275 bid. It is understood the First National Bank was appointed executor to George F. Baker's estate, the fees for which would be considerable.

Graham-Paige Buys Plant in Ontario

New York, May 4 (AP)—Graham-Paige Motors Corp. has acquired a modern manufacturing building at Walkerville, Ont., and will build passenger cars there as soon as machinery and equipment can be installed. The building has more than 61,000 square feet of floor space.

Grains Are Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 4—Grains closed higher today. Active wheat futures pulled ¾ to ⅞c higher at the finish; old deliveries ⅛c up to ⅝c down, and corn ½ to ⅛c higher. Oats were ⅛ to ⅜c better and rye 1 to 1¼c up.

Cigar Price Is Cut

Manchester, N. H., May 4—R. G. Sullivan Co. has reduced price of its Dexter cigar to five cents. Formerly it sold for two for 15 cents.

SOUTHERN BEATS MIDLAND TO KEEP W. G. A. LEAD

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Speaking of Rowing, Charles Right Course. For Harvard and Yale. | Old Familiar Faces. Primo Starts Today. Sharkey Scales 202.

Bit o' This and That on Sport's Menu

CAST YOUR peepers elsewhere on the sports pages where the two rowing scenes, Coast to Coast apart, are shown. In one photo you see Harvard showing its heels to Princeton and M. I. T. in last Saturday's triangular race on the Charles. In the other the International Newsreel has snapped Alamitos Bay, California, where next year's Olympic Rowing Events will be conducted. The Californians have become tired boasting of their climate. Now the Native Sons have taken to boasting about their rowing courses. With usual Western breeziness they label Alamitos Bay "the finest rowing course in America." They're wrong, Patricia, all wrong. Here in the old Bay State we have two rowing courses, Mister Boston's own Charles, and Worcester's Lake Quinsigamond which have that Alamitos Bay with "the billion dollar background," those steel skeletons of the oil wells—grimy fingers of Commerce soiling what otherwise might be one of Nature's most beautiful pictures—backed off the map.

MAY SUTTON BUNDY

As we watched Harvard's stalwart oarsmen, their shell cutting the water like a knife, show their wake to Princeton and M. I. T., last Saturday, over the beautiful Charles River course, we could not help wondering why Harvard and Yale picked out New London for their head quarters and the Thames as the battleground for their annual water duel. At least the Harvard-Yale boat races should be held here on the Charles in alternate years.

"That thing never will happen," says a friend looking over our shoulder as we write "as long as there are so many Harvard and Yale men officially connected with and financially interested in the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Look at the money the N. Y., N. H. & H. would lose if the great equatic event was transferred to Boston."

The N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. would make more money if Harvard and Yale met in Boston. Not only that but other railroads providing inlets from the North and West also would profit. So would Boston hotels and business houses. The Thames is Yale's course. The Charles is Harvard's. On alternate years the Crimson and the Blue should have it out on the Charles.

JACK QUINN

SPRINKLED UP and down the column today you see five familiar faces in the sports world. Faces belonging to owners who, although well past 40, continue to blaze the trail in their sports specialities.

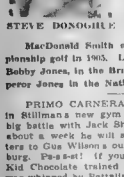
STEVE DONOGHUE

Atop the column is Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, mother of four children, but still agile and skilful enough to be Helen Wills' rival. She began her tennis career in 1900 and won the National Women's Open in 1904.

You're all familiar with Jack Quinn, now hurling for the Dodgers. Jack broke into baseball in 1907. He has been in the big leagues since 1909.

Steve Donoghue, 47 years young, has won six English Derbies, three of them in succession. He's still Brittania's leading jockey.

Six-day bike racing certainly offers a test of stamina and endurance. Reggie McNamara has competed in more than 50 of the long grinds.



REGGIE MCNAMARA

MacDonald Smith of the well-known golfing family began championship golf in 1905. Last year he finished second, two strokes behind Bobby Jones, in the British Open and again was right behind the Emperor Jones in the National.

PRIMO CARNERA starts training today in Stillman's new gym in New York for the big battle with Jack Sharkey on June 10. In about a week he will shift his training quarters to Gus Wilson's outdoor pines at Orangeburg. Pea-nuts! If you're at all superstitious Kid Chocolate trained at Wilson's when he was whipped by Battalino and Sammy Mandell when he was knocked by Singer. Jack Sharkey trained at Wilson's for the fight with Max Schmeling in which the Dutchman took the title on a foul. Look out Primo, or the voodoo will get you if you don't watch out!

Sharkey himself is hard at work here at Toland's gym. He will remain in Boston until about three weeks before the mill when he will complete his training at one of the outdoor New Jersey resorts. It will probably be at Due Beer's place on the road to Lake Hopatcong. The Squire lips the beam at 202 pounds right now and could fight within 10 days. A good, clean living family man with outdoor open air interests our Boston heavy always is in shape.

Our Braves fell out of the top floor apartment in the National League pretty quickly. Lost another yesterday. But they are playing good ball and in the long home stay are likely to get back up front. They're not any worse looking than the Braves of 1914 who from last end position on July 4 closed with the rush that won them the National League pennant and the world's championship.

MacDONALD SMITH

Don Fleet ran a great quarter at the Boston Collegiates in the Harvard Stadium on Saturday. But those who think the B. C. flyer is a chick to win the Intercollegiate title may be counting their chickens before they are hatched. Steele of Penn ripped off a double furlong in 44.5 against Yale on Saturday. He's only one of half a dozen 48 second men Fleet will have to fling his feet in the face of.

Braves Will Play Springfield Club

Thursday and Friday are off days for the Braves this week, but one of the off days is to be used to good purpose. For Thursday is Marsanville and Dreesen day, and the Braves are going to Springfield to play the Springfield club on that date.

As both the Rabbit and Dreesen are former Springfield favorites, this day will be quite an event in western Massachusetts.

Columbia Hopes for Poughkeepsie Win

New York, May 4 (INS)—Columbia students today celebrated the victory of the Columbia varsity eight over Yale and Pennsylvania on the Harlem river Saturday.

The victory of the Blue shellmen was taken as proof that Coach Rich Glendon has wrought another rowing miracle. Hopes are high for a win by Columbia in the classic at Poughkeepsie.

Southern Conquers Midland in W. G. A.

By BILL GRIMES

All three W. G. A. team matches were won and lost by a single point today, Southern retaining the lead by defeating Midland 5 and 4, Northern pushing Central, the defending champion, down into third place, and Western moving into a three-cornered fourth-place tie by winning over Eastern.

Playing her first match with the varsity, Miss Katherine Field was responsible for the Southern District defeating Midland 5 to 4 and retaining its hold on first place in the race for the W. G. A. team match championship today at the Brae Burn Country Club.

With eight matches accounted for and the score 4 all, Miss Field, after being dormie 3, lost the 16th and 17th holes to Mrs. E. T. Sherwood, but she pulled herself together on the home hole and by virtue of a half took the match up which gave Southern its fifth victory of the season and the undisputed ownership of first place.

Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., won her sixth consecutive match of the season, defeating Miss Frances Stebbins 5 and 3. Mrs. Baker was out in 43, which included a 7 and a 6 and was two under 5s when the match ended on the 15th green.

Mrs. W. G. Quimby met her first defeat of the season today when she was beaten by Mrs C. F. Eaton, 6 and 4 at the Country Club. In the Northern-Central match at Kernwood, Miss Rosamond Vahey shot an 82 to defeat Miss Margaret Curtis, the former national champion, 7 and 6

Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

From the professionals' viewpoint, the golf season will be officially opened today when the N. E. P. G. O. and their amateur partners gather at the Norfolk Golf Club for an 18-hole, four-ball, best-ball event.

One of the outstanding pairs in action at Norfolk today will be Jesse P. Guilford and Willis Ogg.

Albemarle retained its lead in the race for the Metropolitan Four Ball League championship by defeating Thorny Lea, 16 to 4. The upset at Albemarle was the defeat of Jesse Guilford by John W. Filoon, and the inability of Guilford and Filoon Wright to break better than even with Filoon and Searles Reed.

Billy Whitcomb, who teamed up with Joe Lynch, for Albemarle, executed one of the prettiest shots of the afternoon when he chipped from about 40 yards off the 8th green and just missed holing out.

Cliff Sowerby is the live wire of the Marlboro Country Club. Sowerby is a hustler and is always ready and willing to perform any duty which will be for the betterment of the club or course.

The old-time followers of junior championship will recall Phil Barry, who played for Thorny Lea yesterday against Albemarle, Barry was beaten by Freddie Wright in the juniors back in 1916.

Evidently the Southern District is taking its golf seriously, for Mrs. L. H. Dalton, who won her first three matches, was dropped to the second team immediately she met with her first defeat.

Besides Albemarle, the other Metropolitan Four Ball League winners yesterday were Valemi, Bellevue and Sandy Burr. Playing its home course, Wellesley was on the short end of a 15 to 5 match with the Witch City team, while Framingham and Bear Hill were 13½ to 6½ losers to Bellevue and Sandy Burr, respectively.

John Cowan the veteran Oakley professional, claims he has discovered a putter which he can manipulate so as to hole out on every green in the regulation number of putts.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

The aim of your golf should be to make your swinging effort unconsciously. While you think of weight-shifting hip turning and such details as these your mind will be on these details, and this will interfere with action which might otherwise be automatic and smoothly unconscious. While I have been clear in my own mind as to shift of weight, and have known there is no such action, nor lateral hip action, or anything else like that, I have postponed discussion of it until this time of year so you could see off for this year's play with a brand new and, I think, a much sounder basic understanding. Your first efforts with a more or less fixed right leg may be awkward and stiff.

U. S. Girl Umpire in Paris; Players Can't Talk Back

Paris, May 4 (INS)—A feminine voice yells, "You're out!" to baseball players of the new Paris-American League, and to date there has been no back talk.

A fair lass of Washington, D. C.—Miss Kathleen MacFarlane, aged 18—is the first woman umpire in France, and, as far as enthusiasts here know, the world.

She made her debut at Longchamps in a 15-7 victory of a North American team over South Americans.

"While her vocation is not used to intimidate pitchers and hawk-eyed fans, it is a fact that Miss MacFarlane is a physical culture expert and is rounding out a three-year course in Swedish gymnastics.

"I have not been obliged to send anyone back to the bench yet, and I don't think I ever will," she told International News Service.

Between games in Paris she studied the French language and physical culture.

U. S. DAVIS CUP TEAM ELIMINATES MEXICO

SHIELDS AND WOOD WIN DOUBLES

Mexico City, May 4 (INS)—Two singles matches, reduced to the status of exhibition play, remained on the program today for America's Davis cup team.

The American aggregation took its third straight victory and won its way to the second round of play when the doubles team of Frank X. Shields and Sidney B. Wood downed the Mexican combination of Ricardo Aspia and Manuel Llano 6—3, 6—3, 6—4.

The singles matches will be played tomorrow, Shields meeting Alfonso Unda and Wilmer Allison playing Tapia.

Despite the outcome of these matches, the American team is now qualified to meet Canada in the North American zone final at Montreal, starting May 21.

'PURE' RINGMEN OF ITALY IN U. S.

New York, May 4 (INS)—Amateur boxing enthusiasts had their first view of Italy's championship boxing team, winners of the Olympic title, today when the S. S. Conte Biancamano reached her pier. The Italian champions will oppose a representative United States team in the international bouts to be held in Madison Square Garden May 13.

Eight of the tricolor's star ringmen, one a European champion, will be greeted by a throng of their countrymen and by A. A. U. officials.

Of the eight boxers, the six champions present records which are impressive. Three of them are the successors of the bantamweight, lightweight and middleweight winners of past Olympics. They are Vincenzo Dallorto, bantam star; Mario Bianchi, amateur lightweight king of Europe and Italy, and Aldo Longinetti, middleweight, who recently mowed down all contenders in the international ruins with Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

Doug Fairbanks in British Amateur Golf

London, May 4 (INS)—Douglas Fairbanks, American film star, today entered the British amateur golf championship, to be played over the Westward Ho! course beginning May 18.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 4 (INS)—Teamed with Phil Neer of San Francisco, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and her partner yesterday defeated Miss Mary Greef, University of Southern California, and Jack Tibail, Los Angeles, 7—5, 7—5.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

"Dick Dunn, general manager of the Boston Garden," said Mr. Boston today, "has gone to Cleveland to turn on the steam for the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling bout which takes place in the new municipal stadium at Cleveland July 3.

"George Funk, Garden director, tells me there is not anything to the wild report that Dunn is through as generalissimo at the North Station sport palace. Dick has made good here and can stick around as long as he wishes.

"The Garden directors have voted against leasing the building to outside attractions for long periods. This interferes with the boxing programs. Billy Ames had things rolling following the Fuller-Canzoneri and Callahan-Rastallino mills. Then he found the Garden had been leased to outside attractions for six weeks.

"Ames will get back into high on May 15 when Al Mello defends his title as New England welterweight champion against Lou Brouillard of Worcester. This shapes up as a real scrap.

"Col. Bob McKirdy has put in a modest bid for the Maloney-Schaaf bout, which now appears a certainty. The Garden is also after this attraction.

Dan McKetrick Back in Pugilistic Picture

"Johnston, introducing Biffy Duffy, stated that the latter is the most popular manager of boxers in America, a man without a single enemy. The 'Boy Bandit' admitted he has accumulated his share of enemies during his years in the boxing game.

"Dan McKettrick, matchmaker for Johnston's Dodger A. C., managed Joe Jeanette. When Jeanette battled Georges Carpentier in Paris, Dan picked the Frenchman to win. Joe got the decision, but McKetrick didn't believe he earned it.

"McKettrick was pilot of Frank Moran when the latter dropped a decision to Jack Johnson in Paris. McKettrick and Moran had a jam over their end of the purse. Dan finally had the money tied up by a court order, and the case not been settled yet.

"Jack Dempsey wants the heavyweights to battle 20 rounds in his proposed show at Reno, Nev., on July 4. Which explains why there isn't any wild rush on the part of the stars to hop out to Reno. They argue why should they sign to box 20 rounds when they can get as much money for 10.

"It looks as if the proposed bout between Sammy Fuller and Ray Miller, billed for the Garden on May 29, is out. Fuller prefers to tackle Tony Canzoneri, Jimmy McLarnin or some other standout battler.

"Nate Lewis, matchmaker of the Chicago Stadium, is trying to arrange a tussle between Fuller and Canzoneri for the junior welterweight title. Tony won this championship when he flattened Jackie Berg. If Fuller should beat Canzoneri again, the latter would still have his lightweight crown.

Tom Kirby to Try to Teach Carnera How

"Tom Kirby, who got a grand when he signed a contract with Leon See, will go to Orangeburg to help train Carnera for his meeting with Sharkey. Kirby has boxed a great deal with Sharkey in the gym, and it is believed that the real reason See purchased Tom was so as to get the latter to tip Primo on how to battle Sharkey.

"When Maloney battles Schaaf, you will find Napoleon Jack Dorval in the semifinal. Dorval recently knocked out Dick Daniels at Minneapolis.

"I saw Honeyboy Finnegan dashing through the court house the other day. He's just as popular as a court officer as he was as a boxer. They don't come any better than Honeyboy."

Boston Rangers Win From Dorchester

Boston Rangers defeated Dorchester Waverley, 4 to 1, in a State charity cup tie yesterday at Franklin field. The Rangers kicked off against the wind, and after five minutes' play, Tickle sent a nice ball out to the right for Stewart to meet it first time. He gave Pettigrew no chance with his parting shot.

Rangers were on top and McGonagle put them two up after 10 minutes' play. Waverley put on some pressure and McLaughlan reduced the lead. In the second period Stewart moved into center in place of Tickle, who was injured and scored a nice goal. Russell put the game on ice when he scored Rangers' fourth goal.

SOCCER PLAYER HURT IN GAME

In the soccer game between the Lynn General Electric and Fall River soccer teams at the Lynn G. E. field, yesterday afternoon, Thomas Byrne, 21, and Joseph Mahoney, 22, both members of the Lynn team, collided and were knocked unconscious.

They were removed to the Lynn Hospital where doctors found it necessary to take six stitches in Byrne's head to close a wound. Mahoney was revived and suffered no injuries. The two tried to "head" the ball at the same time. Lynn won the game, 2-1.

Mt. Bowdoin Beats De Valles Nine, 4-1

Mt. Bowdoin K. of C. defeated Fr. De Valles K. of C., both of Dorchester, 4 to 1, at Savin Hill yesterday.

Gordon, the pitcher for the losing team, made all his team's hits, two doubles and a single. Swanson hit two doubles and a single for the winners while Murphy made a home run.

New York Giants Bow to Newark, 2-1

Newark, N. J., May 4—The Newark Soccer club beat the New York Giants in an American Soccer league match at Clark's field, here, 2 to 1. All the goals were scored in the first period, Dolan's setting the pace.

BROOKLINE BOY IS HONORED

A singular honor was given recently to Thompson B. Maury of Brookline, when he was awarded a varsity swimming letter while in his first year at West Point. Maury was the only cadet of the fourth class thus honored. He must wait until the conclusion of his first year at the Point, June 11, before the letter will be given him.

Maury collected his varsity award because of his tank work, particularly in the 220 backstroke, his specialty. In the furlong, Maury shattered the West Point tank record.

Argentine Runner Sets New Record

Buenos Aires, May 4—Zabala, an Argentine runner, set a new South American record for 10,000 meters in the South American athletic championship meet here.

Zabala ran the distance in 31 minutes and 19 seconds.

The world's record for the distance, held by Paavo Nurmi of Finland, is 30 minutes 6 1-5 seconds.

Ferrell Chalks Up Fifth Victory

Detroit, May 4—Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's star hurler, set down Detroit, 7 to 4, in the series final here for his fifth win and his fourth consecutive victory of the season.

HAKOAHS LOSE TO YANKEES

New York, May 4—The New York Yankees' soccer team defeated the Hakoah All Stars, 2 to 1, at Starlight Park, yesterday, in an American league game before 4000 fans.

The clash was a thriller from start to finish, but the national champions held a slight edge throughout. The high spot was reached at half time, when the national challenge cup was presented to Capt. Alec McNab of the Yankee team, whose broken right arm was in a sling.

Mild, ripe, choice tobaccos, mellowed by natural ageing, are blended and cross-blended to give to Chesterfield smoke an aroma, flavor, and smoothness that is just what smokers want. No mere claims will stand up against genuine quality, and more and more Chesterfield smokers are proving this for themselves every day.

HOME STAY OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO TRIBE

SERIES HERE MAY DECIDE FATE

By JOE CASHMAN

The current home stay of the Braves, which will last until May 14 and during which every rival with the exception of Brooklyn is listed to play a series at the Wigwam, promises to make or break the local National League entry for the season.

The Tribe got off to a great start this year and despite the defeats it has suffered in its last four games, it is in fourth place today.

Whether it will remain a first division contender throughout the campaign depends largely on how it fares during the next three weeks.

If the Warriors can do as well as the Giants, Robins and Phils and defend their present position against the assaults of the Western clubs, which will open their first invasion of the East on Saturday, they should be in the running for a place in the select circle right down to the finish.

On the other hand, if their three Eastern rivals do any considerable gaining on them while the boys from the wide open spaces are present, the Townsmen are bound to lose both ground and confidence, and their chances of regaining either will be rather slim.

McKechnie Shifts Team Seeking Strong Lineup

Manager Bill McKechnie realizes this and, consequently, is a bit disturbed over the slump his charges have been in for the past week.

He has already substituted "Whitey" Dreesen for Charlie Wilson at third base and is likely to make other shifts unless the present lineup starts winning in a hurry.

He wants to get the club going again before the Cards, Cubs and Pirates arrive and will leave no stone unturned in his efforts to succeed.

Poor pitching was responsible for all of the Braves early defeats, but the twirling has been pretty good of late and promises to be better when Harold Haid, former Cardinal right-hander, who is now ready and awaiting the word to start, gets a few games under his belt.

Just let Berger, Worthington, Sheely, Richbourg and Spohrer start hitting as they should and all will be well with the Tribe.

Seibold's Record Spoiled by Phils

Harry "Socks" Seibold, after pitching 20 scoreless innings, went to the hill but to weather the ninth to steer his mates back onto the winning trail.

He hurled good ball but when Pinkey Whitney, enemy third sacker, hit a home run with one man on in the second inning and the same Whitney singled, Friberg tripled and Pitcher Ray Benge singled in the seventh, the visitors had two more than enough runs to win, as all the Tribesmen could collect was six singles and one marker.

Maybe it will be different, though in the second game this afternoon when Southpaw Ed Brandt, only undefeated league pitcher, toes the mound against Lil Stoner, former Detroit Tiger hurler.

Cameronian Picked as Derby Favorite

London, May 4 (AP)—The first three horses in the 2000 guineas at Newmarket last week were installed today as favorites, in the order of their finish, for the Epsom Downs Derby June 3.

Cameronian, winner of the 2000 guineas was quoted at nine to two against today, Goyescas at 13 to 2 and Orpen at 100 to 8.

Jacopo, Marshall Field's three-year-old colt which was the early book favorite but who was withdrawn from the 2000 guineas, has been dropped back down to 100 to 6, Orpen's price.

Rumors have had the colt ill with red worms, a parasite that infects horse pastures.

Comeback of Shires Halted by Injury

Milwaukee, Wis., May 4 (AP)—The "back to the majors by 1932" campaign of Charles Arthur (the Great) Shires is being held up by an injury.

The great one, Milwaukee's regular first baseman, slid into the plate Saturday so earnestly that he suffered a severe bruise and probably will not be able to play before the end of the week.

Johnny Farrell Tells How to Play Golf

By JOHNNY FARRELL.

As Told to ALAN GOULD.

NO. 5—HOW TO TRAIN.

The three most important factors for a competitive golfer, if he is to stick around the top, are:

1. Proper conditioning.
2. The right diet.
3. Relaxation—to keep the proper frame of mind.

In golf soft, flexible muscles are essential to keep the necessary looseness in the swing and pivot. Abdominal muscles must be developed for strength.

I give Artie McGovern's training system credit for putting me in good condition. He directed my dieting and exercise, strengthened my stomach and abdomen.

Before a big tournament it is important for a player to know just how much golf to play and how to reach the "peak" at the right time. This is one of the secrets of Bobby Jones' success. He has the faculty for coming to a big tournament in prime condition.

Another vital thing is relaxation while a tournament is on, or at other times, for that matter. Some fellows relax with a few drinks after a day's tournament play or a hard match.

A shower and a massage accomplishes for me what a drink may do for others. I feel thoroughly relaxed afterward.

Beyond that there should be some way to shake off the grind in play or amusement. We don't all like the same things. Music and dancing, or a good movie, help take my mind off the strain of an important tournament.

Tomorrow—Short Iron Play.

Jamaica Handicaps

By ED CURLEY

Only four are entered, but it should result in a good struggle. Little Nap may scamper home first. His best race was far below his possibilities nor he got off poorly and never had a chance. In his previous outing he outran as good as he will meet here.

Dress Chip showed plenty of speed around Maryland, and may land the place. Moine will be next to impossible to keep out of the money.

Horse	Wt.	Jockey	Fr. Odds
Little Nap	115	Pool	6-5
Dress Chip	113	Kelsey	8-5
Moine	107	Mailey	3-1
Morris	103	Ramsner	6-1

FIRST RACE—Three-year-olds; maidens; claiming; fillies; six furlongs.

Horse	Wt.	Jockey	P. Odds
Hinaway	113	Kennedy	3-1
Inarvon	114	Gilbert	4-1
Finger Tips	100	Callahan	6-1
Charwood	107	Harvey	10-1
Dunsettle	112	Munden	20-1
Lucky Bill	112	Stout	15-1
Ladkin Queen	116	Garner	15-1
Lucky Lad	116	Gray	20-1
Merry Dance	112	Mailey	8-1
Caution	104	Byrne	10-1

Three-year-old maidens start off the day and it is a puzzler, as none has shown any real good form. Hinaway was a hot favorite in her last performance and while she did not do so well, may improve enough to beat this bunch. Harlem will do better here than in her recent outing, and will be contender. Finger Tips has been working good enough to get the call for the short end of the purse.

SECOND RACE—Two-year-olds; maidens; fillies; five furlongs.

Horse	Wt.	Jockey	Fr. Odds
Tom's Bush	117	Parsons	3-1
Skippy L.	117	Smith	4-1
Sl. Alice	117	Mailey	6-1
Brown Queen	117	Eahy	3-1
Lagleton	117	Kelsay	8-1
Mad Step	117	Mailey	15-1
Can't Stop	117	Schneirer	8-1
McGee	117	Garner	6-1
Carletta	117	Catroon	8-1
		Rose

Cholla figures best in the second, a maiden event for two-year-old fillies. Cholla was right behind Straight Lace in her recent performance, and that makes her good enough to get the call. Don't Blush is fast and the clockers tip. On her last race she should finish no worse than second. Skippy L. may be third.

THIRD RACE—Three-year-olds and upward; handicap; six furlongs.

Horse	Wt.	Jockey	Fr. Odds
Milkman	126	McAtee	3-1
Tetrarchal	118	Remillard	8-5
Lullaby II	115	Mailey	5-1
Rubin	110	Rose	8-1

Milkman, which finished a nice second to On Tap in his first start of the season, looks the best of the small field in the third heat. He is a good sprinter and a courageous finisher. He may outgame Tetrarchal in that final drive. The latter can be no worse than second. Lullaby II should outrun Rubin.

FIFTH RACE—Two-year-olds; claiming; five furlongs.

Horse	Wt.	Jockey	Fr. Odds
Argiva	111	Greenberg	5-1
Howea	117	Mailey	4-1
Run On	111	Simms	6-1
Brandon Light	116	Barnes	6-1
Cause Me	111	Harvey	8-1
Outgorus	118	Meese
Garston	107	Hunt
Trust	115	Merck	8-1
Knobbie	112	Rose
Knockout	112	Remillard	20-1
Norwalk	115	Fisher	15-1
Gloria Shoot	102	Scalzo	30-1

SIXTH RACE—Three-year-olds and upward; claiming; mile and seventy yards.

Horse	Wt.	Jockey	Fr. Odds
Nifty Haynes	112	Remillard	4-1
Pass in Review	111	Fischer	6-1
Crushed Stone	111	Rilleski	6-1
Wuisrae	111	Mailey	15-1
Star Fox	113	Merck	20-1
Royal Tree	118	Meese	15-1
Peacock	111	Price	20-1
Abington	118	Garner	20-1
Jackaroo	111	Kenley	30-1
Cockrin	115	Yeager	15-1
Old Pearl	114	Greenberg	20-1
Nelson	111	Ferrain	8-1
Barlera	113	Long	6-1

Nursery Rhymes, which won so nicely the other day, will be hard to beat in the final event. He met with plenty of misfortune in all his previous starts, and is at his best.

Schmeling to End Exhibition Tour

Chicago, May 4 (AP) — Max Schmeling, world's heavyweight champion, will terminate his exhibition tour by appearing at the Chicago Stadium Friday night, Matchmaker Nate Lewis announced last night.

COLUMBIA AND HARVARD LEAD

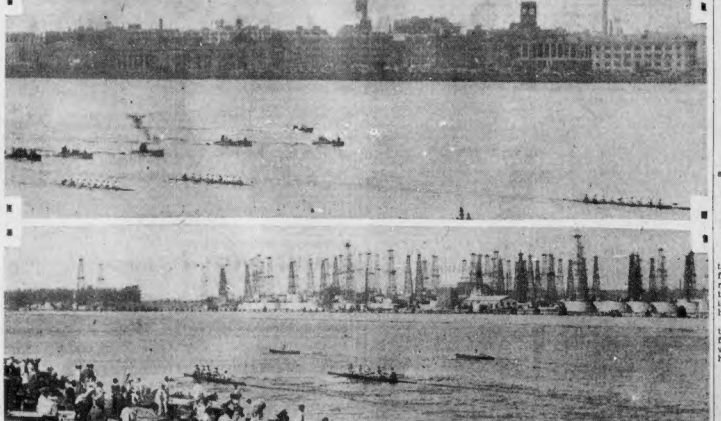
New York, May 4 (AP)—For the next two weeks, Eastern college crews have nothing to do but go through their daily drills and try to devise ways and means of knocking Columbia and Harvard off their places at the top.

Next Saturday is an open date for the oarsmen, but a week later come three races, the Carnegie Cup race bringing together Yale, Princeton and Cornell, a triangular regatta involving Harvard, Navy and Pennsylvania and a dual meeting between Columbia and Massachusetts Tech.

A Harvard crew which was praised after its one race as the best eight Cambridge has seen in 10 years, shares honors with Columbia.

The Crimson crew made slower time than Columbia, rowing the same distance in 9:44 4-5 o nthe Charles, but conditions were not as good nor was Harvard at all pressed by Princeton and Massachusetts Tech, which could do no better than fight for second place four lengths behind.

OUR CHARLES HAS IT ON ALAMITOS BAY



ON OPPOSITE SHORES OF CONTINENT

Upper—Harvard leading home Princeton and M. I. T. in last Saturday's triangular race on the historic Charles. Lower—Alamitos Bay, California, where next year's Olympic rowing events will be contested. Westerners call Alamitos Bay "the finest rowing course in America." We'll leave it to you if Boston's own Charles hasn't got it on that western stretch.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

The Red Sox open a three-game series with the world champion Athletics in Philadelphia today. These rivals were scheduled to have battled four times before this, but they will be clashing for the first time this p. m., as their entire series carded for the Fens last week was rained out.

Milt Gaston, the only one of the Collins' flingers who was not seen in action during the team's home stay, will oppose "Lefty" Grove, ace of the Mackian twirlers, in the opening encounter.

Grove should be hard to beat, but so should Gaston. There are few better pitchers in the league than Milt and after two false starts, it seems about time for him to turn in a winning performance.

Babe Ruth wasn't far out of the way when he predicted upon his release from the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital that he would be back in the fame within four days. He returned to Yankee lineup against the Sox in New York, yesterday, just one week after leaving Boston, following his injury at Fenway Park.

He didn't play the entire game but was in there long enough to get a solitary single and a run to the 8 to 2 triumph the Yanks scored over the Fenway flock.

The thrilling series with the Senators here must have taken a lot out of the Sox. They made more than six errors in the game against the new Yorkers.

Bob Kline, 230-pound rookie from Columbus, gave another great exhibition of relief hurling in the game. Taking the mound at the start of the sixth, the youngster didn't allow the McCarthymen a hit during the remainder of the contest. He may be starting a game one of these days.

And Tom Oliver, to show that the hit he made to win the last game against the Solons wasn't a mistake came through with a single, double and a triple, which was just half of the total of safeties made by the Sox against Roy Sherid.

Harry "Socks" Seibold, Tribal flinger, has his nerve with him all the time. He stepped to the platter in the third inning of the Sabbath tilt against the Phils with instructions to sacrifice and laid down a perfect bunt after two strikes had been called on him.

The Phils are wearing mourning bands on the sleeves of their uniforms out of respect to the memory of William F. Baker, the late president of the club.

Once Dick Bartell, Phils' shortstop, gets on the base paths it is easy to tell that he once played with the Pirates. He keeps his back turned to the bag which he hopes to reach just as Max Carey, former Sucss' coach, always did when he was the greatest base-runner in the game.

After dropping 12 out of their first 13 games, the Cincinnati Reds finally won their second contest of the season by capturing the nightcap of their double-header with the Pirates, yesterday.

If they hadn't, it is probable that their first triumph would have been investigated by some committee or other.

Here is the season less than three weeks old and the champion St. Louis Cardinals are already nine games ahead of the Reds. And still some say that early season games don't count for much. It would be interesting to know Weymouth Dan Howley's answer to that one.

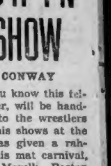
Justin McLaughlin, former all-scholastic pitcher from Brighton high school, made such a hit with Manager "Shano" Collins during spring training that he is included in the Fenway contingent which is now in Philly and will then make a tour of the West.

COLLEGIATE COLOR IN MAT SHOW

By JACK CONWAY

First thing you know this fellow, Paul Bowser, will be handing out letters to the wrestlers who appear in his shows at the Arena. Paul has given a rah-rah setting to his mat carnival, headed by Al Morelli, Boston College star, and Pat McKay, Irish heavyweight, billed for Thursday night.

Delegations of Maroon and Gold rooters will be awarded special sections. They will be permitted to render all the Boston College cheers they wish as long as they don't overlook a young man by the name of Morelli. And I don't think they will.



Jack Conway

Morelli, however, won't be permitted to cheer all of the college color. I find that Bowser has slipped Count Zarynoff into the semifinal against Louis Loew, French heavyweight. The Count is a graduate of the Nicholai Cavalry Academy at Kiev, Russia. This institution rates with the best schools of learning.

Nick Lutze of the University of California will take on Stanley Stasiak of the College of Hard Knocks in a time limited match. Stasiak is the young man who presented Lutze with the black optic he recently sported at the Arena. George Vassell and Farmer McLeod have also been booked to appear at the Arena show, but as neither will have a clearing section of his own on hand, I'll have to adopt these two boys. Vassell did the dirtiest job of his education eating in restaurants, while McLeod cannot figure out how a college educated man could have made him a better wrestler. Having seen George in action, I believe there is much logic in his statement.

Tiny Roebuck Got His Start as Boxer

It is easy to understand why Tiny Roebuck, Indian wrestler, is such a terrific opponent for any of his foes. He was formerly a heavyweight boxer. He took up wrestling as his second love. In these days, when wrestling fans prefer fight-hand punches, the exponents of the toe hold, Tiny is quite a riot. He furnishes large gobs of action.

He has one more point more about catch-as-catch-can wrestling than Roebuck, but he is not so much ahead of the Reds. And still some say that early season games don't count for much. It would be interesting to know Weymouth Dan Howley's answer to that one.

However, went to Steinke on a foul when Roebuck persisted in punching the Indian than calling wrestling holds into play.

Roebuck and Steinke have been signed for a return match at the Garden on next Monday night. All that the rivals ask is that the bout be permitted to go to a finish no matter what happens.

Babe Ruth as I Know Him

By SUPT. CROWLEY

hobby, the Babe, in that serious way of his, went deeper and deeper into the subject.

Babe Plans Firm

Crowley and Ruth, Sleuths

He came down to headquarters with Arthur and put me through quite after quiz on crime and criminals—just in a conversational way, of course. He sat in the bureau of criminal investigation and talked with the boys there on their cases. And he began to buy books dealing on criminology.

Then, a few years ago, he made a proposition to me.

"Super," he said, "you'll be out of the police department some day, and I'll be out of baseball. You'll be retired in a few years and by that time I'll probably have only a leg and a half. What do you say if we go into the detective business?"

Well, of course, I thought at first that he was fooling, but he wasn't fooling at all. In that way that makes him steal a base when his team is runs ahead and the base is not actually needed; that makes him take a chance with his neck in the outfield, although the fact that he trapped the ball off the fence wouldn't away the game one way or the other—in that way he had gone into police work.

No—the Babe wasn't fooling. His first suggestion was made to me years ago, and on every trip here since he has referred to the same thing. But we haven't hit yet on whether the firm name will be Ruth & Crowley or Crowley & Ruth—if there is a firm name in that line of business.

I think the Babe would be a good detective, just as he has become a good ball player. The thing that has made the Babe successful is that when he once takes hold of a matter he is in there heart and soul, and despite his years of effort he is still as enthusiastic about living, about playing and about working as on the first day I met him.

He has his own niche in the world by his own laborious carving—and he has had a lot of fun doing it, without knowingly hurting anyone in the process. That's the one drawback he sees in crime detection—his efforts would be the means of making someone else unhappy. But then, he reminds himself that the person hurt already has hurt someone—and that makes it square all around with the Babe.

Secret Up to Now

Blind Boy Affects Super

This detective thing has been rather a secret between up until now, but he mentioned it again when I was in to see him at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital the week before last. He has it right at the back of his head continually.

Incidentally, that scene at the hospital when the blind boy, for whom the Babe had done so much, came in to say good-bye, was one that I would dislike exceedingly witnessing again. I have had seen many harrowing sights in my years of police work, and have heard many words coming out across hopeless lips.

But the little speech made that day at the hospital by the blind boy who could not walk—a speech thanking Babe for his cosing of the boy's possible last days—did things to the Babe.

When I heard, on the other hand, what Ruth had actually done for the boy, I felt as proud of my friendship with the ball player as if he were another of my sons—and the ties were those of blood.

Another instalment of this interesting series in tomorrow's Evening American.

Five and Ten turn any of those things he denied her.

Ramon regarded her with gentle reproach.

"Why are you like that?"

"Like what?"

"Shy, like a—like one of those beautiful wild pumas that used to live on the edge of one of my father's estate in the interior of Peru."

Puma! She did not know whether to laugh down what she regarded as his absurdity or incinerate him with the rebuff of which she was so capable.

"You don't understand the strange wild beauty of these graceful creatures. You must not think the comparison odious, Mrs. Earick."

What were you to do with a boy like that, whose sweetness was indomitable?

They sat on the coping of the fountain, against a backrest formed by a Malaga-grape vine the thickness of an arm.

"You're a silly boy for making me indulge your whim for a cocktail in this ridiculous conservatory of my husband's, where [illegible] exist really blooms, but pronounceable, unwearable specimens and expensive botanical freaks are always sprouting their own and somehow don't. Except by the time orchids are ridiculously cheap at every corner florist's."

The impersonal portion went sailing over his head.

"I know it is only a little glass house, but it ramifies ever seem first to me, since it is where you first let me dare know you a little better."

Nothing to Know

"I'm afraid, dear boy, there is nothing to know."

"You do not expect me to believe that."

No, she did not, but she said it again.

"You are a liberal education to me."

"How liberal?"

"I am tired of all your pretty girls here in this country who have no race in particular. You have a face."

"My dear boy, are you given to profound observation when that?"

"You must not make me ridiculous. I mean you have a face that hangs like a cameo in the memory."

She looked at him, and, through the glazed fabric of a skin that did not naturally take the flush, blushed with the surprised sweetness of a girl.

"You naughty Latin boy. I am old enough to be your mother."

"I am glad, though, that you are not. Fancy the tragedy of having to be no more than a Duse or Cleopatra or Bernhardt."

"My boy doesn't feel that way," she said, clambering back to what safety she could.

"Don't say that."

"What?"

"It hurts me."

"What?"

"My boy—in that tone. I am jealous, Mrs. Earick—jealous of him—but of all the life that has claim on you."

She had the impulse to rise and rebuke him, and, instead, permitted his hand to wander again over the thick fur ruffle at her wrists.

Then the butler served cocktails and they were silent at a safe distance while he puttered, but the ice of young Lopez, above the three cocktails he tossed off, were over her face with the sweetishness of an anaesthetic mask.

"I'm going to send you along home now," she said, and rose. There were no lights and a thick hush of November snow was falling against the glass walls, closing them in.

He Kisses Her

"I don't want to go home, Jenny."

Jenny! The plushy way he had of saying that! The impertinence of his saying that, the dearness.

"I don't want to go home, Jenny, without something to tide me over until the next time."

That was the way his speech was not from the effect of the cocktails, but from an excited lisp, adorable to her, that seemed to crowd his speech.

"Impertinent," she said, frightened, in an exultant way beyond anything that had ever happened to her, and pulling out a stiff arm to ward him off.

He used the arm as a lever to draw her toward him. To the silence of the big white flakes that were pasting themselves against their panes incredulously, he dipped the back of her neck against his arm and sank his lips down on to hers.

Our State Progresses

Let's Have Quick Action on Ely's Forward Looking Policies

Governor Ely has at last received from the reluctant, hesitating hand of the Legislature a large proportion of his program for relief of unemployment and for progressive development of the resources of this State.

In this campaign the horizon has been clouded at times by partisan, political obstinacy and the records have been cluttered by useless and nonsensical financial and social philosophies.

Our institutions were run down by the niggardly policy of previous Administrations and by the inattention of previous Legislatures.

State officials made a fetish of the pay-as-you-go policy. They overtaxed the people in order to reduce the State debt and establish economy records for themselves while poor and indigent citizens were refused admission to our overcrowded, dilapidated asylums and hospitals.

Automobile users through the gasoline tax paid millions for highways whose construction was too often delayed or too often allotted to sections of the Commonwealth small in population but big in political influence at the State House.

The people were given fictitious tax reductions while every conceivable form of indirect taxation was levied upon them.

The State treasury was in a splendid condition, due largely to the exactions assessed upon the people in their time of plenty.

And the State should have been the first, as Governor Ely rightly proclaimed, to come to the service of its people in a period of depression when public officials from Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington to Beacon Hill in Boston were imploring private employers to hasten the revival of normal business.

Now that the Governor's program has been adopted substantially, it ought to be put into effect at once.

Men will be given employment.

New highways will be constructed for the convenience and comfort of both passenger and commercial vehicles.

Hospitals and asylums will be enlarged and the State will be able to accommodate its people adequately without forcing the ill, suffering and aged to sleep on cots in the corridors and even the dining rooms of State institutions.

The abominable, archaic Charlestown State Prison will be abolished and men will be sent to a prison colony at Norfolk where they can have an ordinary chance of becoming good citizens again instead of being steeped in criminal temptations.

The State will derive the advantage of the low prices of materials for these constructions.

And the expense of it will fall in the future when times are good, when prosperity is fully re-established and when the citizens will be in a much better condition to pay.

Now that the State has started forward with confidence and courage, let its private citizens in every line of business be encouraged by its example.

Prohibition's Perils

Chesterton Points Out Threatened Disasters

"ALCOHOLISM HAS NEVER THREATENED DISASTER AS IT IS THREATENING AMERICA TODAY."

So says Gilbert K. Chesterton, returning to England after a visit of several months in the United States.

These are TEAGIO and arresting words, uttered by one of the foremost among living men of letters. His works are known and admired from one end of this country to the other. His words command attention and carry weight throughout the English-speaking world.

He is known by his writings and speeches, not only a clear understanding of our national character, but the most friendly appreciation of our life and civilization.

"THERE ARE NO INNS IN AMERICA," says he, "BUT THERE IS PLENTY TO DRINK."

And he adds: "IT ISN'T NORMAL FOR GIRLS OF SIXTEEN TO GO TO DANCES AND DRINK RAW ALCONOL."

Chesterton, the brilliant essayist and kindly visitor, with his trained gift of accurate observation, says only in substance what the Wickersham Commission says in its official report, summarizing the conditions which lead the commission to its official conclusion that NATIONAL PROHIBITION IS A FAILURE.

The Wickersham Commission speaks of "the new and larger field of corruption" which the liquor traffic has opened up:

"The serious obstacle to the observance and enforcement of national prohibition laws, arising from the adverse state of public opinion; the great margin of profit in smuggling liquor, in the diversion of industrial alcohol, in illicit distilling and brewing, in bootlegging and in the manufacture and sale of products, of which the bulk goes into the illicit making of liquor, and the increasing strain upon courts, prosecuting machinery and penal institutions, the invitation to hypocrisy and evasion."

Thus from divergent points of approach, comes unison of judgment. The commission speaks the language of official expression. The literary artist finds words that bring his message closer to our sense of life's realities.

Poor Old Silver

The King of Abyssinia, whose military officers still wear the mane of a lion hanging down their backs when in full regalia, feels that he must be up to date financially.

Abyssinia is to be put on a gold basis; excise duties and other taxes will be raised to make this possible.

That, in a small way, will further discourage the use of silver and diminish its value. Coins generally used in Abyssinia have been Austrian thalers of silver. The gold standard won't make much difference to the average Abyssinian. For money he uses bars of salt, rifle cartridges, empty bottles and tin cans.

Each nation that demonstizes silver, as Britain did in India, helps to diminish the world's buying power.

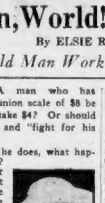
Listen, World! :: Wife's Side

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Should Man Work for Low Wages?

SHOULD A man who has worked at the union scale of $8 be willing now to take $4? Or should he remain idle and "fight for his rights"?

And suppose he does, what happens at home? Who pays for his "magnificent gesture"? There is the other side of it, that "A Disgusted Wife" is presenting today. Here's how it started—



Elsie Robinson

A contractor inserted this ad in a morning paper—"CARPENTERS—5—ROUGH WORK; MUST BE FAST WORKERS — $4 A DAY. APPLY at . . . JONES ST."

The next mail brought a flock of letters protesting against this "grasping capitalist." Sounded interesting. I went out to see. He didn't look either grasping or capitalistic. A tired, bent workingman, wiping the sweat from a worried brow as he stopped to answer questions. The gist of his answer being—

"Yes, I suppose it does make 'em sore to have to take $4 after they've worked themselves up to $8 or $9. But it's as hard on me as it is on them. I can't get my old price for my jobs, either. Times have changed. Useless for me to try 'n' buck it. What's better—shut up shop, then all of us will starve? Or keep on going, paying as much as I can?"

Plenty of men asking those questions—and no answer yet. Millions of dollars locked up in banks. And, along every highway, idle men marching in ceaseless, desperate file. Whose fault is it? Fault of union workers who won't lower a wage scale? Or is theirs another "last gallant stand"? Fault of the employers who won't pay old time wages when the new time market is cut in half? But how long will they be employers if they do? And meantime, at home . . . listen.

"Dear Elsie Robinson:

"I read that article you wrote about the man who offered $4 for carpenters. Maybe you'll think I'm funny, seeing that I'm the wife of a union man, but I certainly wanted to get in on that argument and tell a few facts to those workers who won't accept $4. I guess it's time us wives spoke up—especially wives like me who see their children half starving. And believe me there are plenty of us.

"My husband is in the Building Trades. He is out of work, the children and I are without clothes and shoes, and yet he has turned down several jobs because they only paid $4. Last night he had some of his pals in and one of them, a bricklayer, thought it was a huge joke because he could loaf on his job while getting paid for it. Is it any wonder that people with a little money are afraid to have work done? Why don't the Building Trades men raise that some of the people they work for are just as poor as themselves?

"I have a sister who has six children. Her husband is now doing a job that earns him $3 a day, with his meals. The man he is working for only earns $5 himself. Yet, Elsie, you should see my sister's nice little home. When my brother-in-law comes home he doesn't sit down and complain about his lot or boast about the big union wages he used to get. He works around his house and the garden and they look like a million. Their children are well fed and decently dressed, while ours are without the plain necessities.

"How I wish we women could get into the Building Trades. Believe me, a woman who watches her children starving isn't going to hold up business just because, once upon a time, she got a higher wage. SHE'LL TAKE WHAT SHE CAN GET AND KEEP GOING.

"A Disgusted Wife."

Well, there you have three sides of it. The Employer's side . . . the Workingman's side . . . the Wife's side—What's the answer? I don't know. DO YOU?

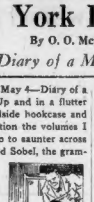
New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Diary of a Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, May 4—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and in a flutter over my new bedside bookcase and arranging in rotation the volumes I desire to read. So to saunter across town with Bernard Sobel, the gramarian, and in this mad motor age we seemed to be the last of the vanishing flaneurs.



In front of the Nora Bayes theatre came upon Al Jolson, the minstrel, and while chatting Texas Guinan came along. "You've met Jolson?" I ventured. "Met him?" she replied. "We used to sell medicine together." Homeward, and came upon an ambulance carrying off a poor fellow who fainted gazing at a freak show.

To dinner at the Irvin Cobbs with my wife. And their daughter Buff and husband Steve Brodie there. Also Pat and Rupert Hughes and Rupert and the host in rare conversational form. Late to bed reading William Seabrook's "Jungle Ways" in which he told of eating cooked human flesh, to me quite horrible.

Rupert Hughes was cornered by a professional bore in the lounge of a club the other afternoon. After a long winded solo about nothing in particular, Hughes finally interjected: "Not so loud. The people at the next table are yawning."

In night libraries of New York, 90 per cent of those who stay in the reading rooms until the lights go out are of Jewish faith. Some are middle aged and some shawled and bewigged replicas of those figures in shadowy doorways of the Ghetto. Many elderly couples brought from the old world by successful children attend night schools to adjust themselves with the new. In the same fashion and impelled by the common passion of their race, the Yiddish theaters presenting the best plays are thronged.

The new Cloud Club on the 68th floor of the Chrysler building has the wealthiest membership of any luncheon organization in town. It has 110 members and seen there daily are such notables as Charles M. Schwab, Walter Chrysler, Bernard Gimbel, Jules Bache and so on. Women are not permitted save on Saturday during the summer months. In one section windows are especially high so lunchers affected by altitude cannot look out.

Personal nomination for the most inspiring radio talk of the current year—Vash Young's "A Fortune to Share."

The loudest noise in New York, according to the Noise Abatement Commission, is that coming through gratings when a subway express roars madly by a local station. Business of changing shirt makers.

Good old Beaunash, of the theater program, can always pinch hit when a columnist is fanning the air. Hear his latest tweedle-de-dee: "Not so long ago town and country clothes overlapped. One could hardly tell one from the other. The rue in urbe idea was a phobia. Out of the welter emerges the correct idea that field and street can never meet any more than East and West in the Kipling ballad. So the Norfolk jacket is by way of being restored to favor. The cap is also on the way up."

One of the legends is that Beaunash is himself a sartorial disappointment. His name, as I recall, is Alfred Bryan and he is nothing of the sort. He is quite the dandy.

"Coco"—as all Paris knows her—Chanel, the dressmaker, burst upon New York and Hollywood like a vivid flame. They found Mlle. Gabrielle the most independent lady visitor of many years, awed by nothing. The Great Garbo means no more in her life than a blue-bloused portier of the pensions. For years she has expressed a quick and somewhat malicious humor with wealthy women who flock to her rue Cambon atelier. She has imposed poverty on grand ladies, forcing them to wear tricots, the clothing of peasants and to store their glittering jewels in safety boxes and wear false ones she devised. She, herself, knew biting poverty in girlhood, and as "La Coco Magnifique" there is a hidden and tigrine ferocity behind her purring smile.

The Marry-Go-Round - By Helen Rowland

Ritzy Greenwich Village

THE PASSING of Greenwich Village, that "Latin Quarter" of New York, is one of the signs of the Jazz Age.

"The Village," as a writer recently remarked, "was a state of mind—not a locality." And "mind" cannot compete with the saxophone, the speakeasy and the dollar sign.

* * *

No longer can you climb the rickety stairs to Grace Godwin's Garret and linger until midnight over a cup of coffee, rubbing brain cells, and striking out sparks of wit and philosophy; telling each other your Big Idea, and dreaming your dreams of setting the world on fire.

* * *

Where the little basement coffee shops once welcomed you with candlelight and crackling open fires, there are only speakeasies now.

* * *

And you cannot "linger and dream" in a speakeasy, unless you keep on buying drinks. Which rather tends to drown any Big Ideas and befuddles the most sparkling wit. Dreams and alcohol won't mix.

* * *

Most of the quaint "characters" who were part of the glamor of The Village have gone high-hat. Some of them are selling bonds or singing in night clubs. And some of them have become famous authors and wear monocles and live in pent houses, on the roofs of fashionable hotels. Scratch a cynic and you find a sentimentalist. Hand a "bohemian" a few thousand dollars and you've got a super-snob.

* * *

And where are the lovers, who sat under the trees in Washington Square or around the fireplaces, and argued so passionately against the tyrannical conventions of matrimony and Mrs. Grundy? Where are the lovers of yesterday?

I'll tell you where they are—but don't faint! They are all MARRIED! To each OTHER! And living out in the suburbs, where the air is good for the baby.

Land of Strange Mixtures, Many Beliefs

We all read about India and Ghandi, sincere little man of strange power, who says India's 320,000,000 must be free from British rule.

The girl beside her, a Nayar girl from southern India, is one of the 60,000,000 "untouchables." The woman on the left in the upper picture would consider herself polluted and disgraced if she should, even accidentally, touch this young girl "untouchable" next to her. It would be necessary for the high-caste woman to go through a course of purification to restore her "high caste" defiled and lowered by contact with the unspeakable outcast.

You might say: "I prefer the outcast untouchable. I like her looks better." But if you lived in India, you would know that any association, conversation or contact, to say nothing of marriage, with such a person would be impossible.

The 60,000,000 "untouchables," of many races and various religions, beg the British to remain and protect them from the "high caste" ruling classes. The latter, if they had control of

India, would hold down the "untouchables" in their misery, perpetuate child marriage and restore the ancient "suttee," or burning alive of young widows with the bodies of their old husbands, which the British have abolished.

The other two pictures, also showing natives of India, impress on you the fact that India is a land of many languages, religions and types. The girl in the lower picture, with the ring in her nose, is a Mohammedan dancing girl. Her business is to amuse men, and she is referred to as "the descendant of a thousand years of courtesan matriarchy."

"Matriarchy," as you know, is a system under which women rule and children take the name of their mother. It once prevailed all over the world.

The fierce looking man in the lower picture is one of the Moplah, a word that means "Mother's son." One of many tribes of fiercely fanatical peasants in southern India, this man is the offspring of Arab invaders and aboriginal women. The people to which he belongs not long ago rose and brutally massacred their Hindu neighbors of higher caste. It will interest American farmers to know that their complaint was about the difficulty of making a living on their land.

India has its Parsees, intelligent traders, descendants of fire worshippers that came from Persia. Next to the Rajahs, they have most of the money. The Rajahs, protected by the British in their rights, including the right to exploit the miserable people, are the Indian Princes, and represent the royal class. The Sikhs, military fighting Hindus, make good soldiers for Britain.

India has a strange hodge podge of 320,000,000 human beings, with innumerable religions, superstitions, hatreds, jealousies, caste rule and fantastic belief.

The marvel is that the British have energy and patience to keep on trying to organize and rule them.
